HUNDREDS of volunteers are to patrol the streets of Sheppey in a bid to rid the streets of dog mess

Residents are determined to find a non-confrontational way to combat the problem and hope the 'Poo Army' will do the trick.

The Green Dog Walkers (GDW) scheme was originally set up in the Falkirk council area of Scotland by a volunteers. It has proved so successful it now boasts 700 volunteers who regularly pound the streets.

A joint collaboration between the charity, Sheppey Matters and Swale council will see the initiative rolled out across Swale – but the Island will be the first district in England to gain a GDW licence.

Amanda Duddle, spokesman for Sheppey Matters said: "Dog fouling continues to be a huge problem on the island.

"The council is already stretched, so we wanted to work with them to do something about it. The Falkirk scheme has been such a success. It may take a couple of years to recruit volunteers, but we will be looking at hundreds."

Patrols will offer dog-waste bags as a friendly reminder to dog-walkers to clear up after their pets.

Councillor Adrian Crowther has obtained funding from Swale council to cover the cost of the Falkirk licence, dog-waste bags, armbands and collars.

Tim Oxley, animal control officer at Swale council welcomed the scheme. He said: "Dog

Runners train with popstar Will Young

By James Benjamin

james.benjamin@kosmedia.co.uk

POPSTAR Will Young has been pounding the streets of Sheerness recently as part of his preparations for the London Marathon next month.

The multi-million selling singer will take part in the annual 26-mile race to raise money for Catch22, a charity which helps young people on a wide variety of issues.

Running along the Sheerness seafront, Mr Young was accompanied by 15 young people, who also joined him in circuit training and warm-up exercises.

The young people came from Catch22's Kent Learning and Employability service, based on Sheppey.

The service supports local young people, aged from 16 to 18, who have experienced a range of difficulties such as a breakdown in family relationships, housing issues, or drug and alcohol problems.

Support workers encourage young people to progress into further education, apprenticeships or training.

Besides his training in Sheerness, Young's marathon preparation has taken him as far afield as Australia, America and Africa. He said: "Training across four continents as been a real challenge, but one I am happy to embrace.

"Tve met many young people at Catch22, such as the young people I trained with in Sheerness, who have overcome seemingly impossible situations. I always keep that in mind when the going gets tough."

Some of the youngsters who trained with Young plan to run the British 10K run on July 10, which follows part of the London 2012 Olympic marathon route.

All funds raised by Young and the young runners will support Catch22's national work with young people facing difficult situations throughout the UK. They may be care leavers, Neet (Not in Education, Training, or Employment), at risk of offending, or young offenders.

Sally Hart, project manager at Catch22 in Sheerness, said: "Will was so down-to-earth and really understood where the young people were coming from.

"We wish him all the best in his London Marathon training. He's really shown every young person here that nothing is impossible.

"I know they are all inspired to train just as hard for their 10k run."

Disabled owner pleas for stolen pups' return

A PAIR of Springer spaniel puppies have been stolen from their owner's house in Sittingbourne.

Police have appealed for witnesses to come forward after the dogs were taken from Simon Gambell's bungalow in Burnham Close, Milton Regis, between 5.30pm and 10pm on Saturday, March 5.

Dosh, a male puppy, and his sister Sky are both black and white and about six months old.

Dosh has two claws coming through one of his dew claws. Sky has one new tooth coming through at an angle.

Mr Gambell, who has spina bifida and relies on a wheelchair to get around, said he had been left devastated by the theft.

"I have had Sky since she was five weeks old and got Dosh about four weeks later," he said. "They mean the world to me and I am so worried about what's happened to them.

"I got them to train up as working dogs. I had just started training them and they were coming on really well. Words can't describe how I feel.

"I just want them back and ask anyone who knows where they are to contact the police."

Both dogs were being treated by the vet for stomach problems and Mr Gambell is worried they may suffer without the proper care.

In an appeal to the public, Detective Sergeant Martin Foord said: "Did you see someone break into the house? Perhaps you saw someone walking the two spaniels that evening and assumed at the time that they were doing so legitimately?

"Have you been offered the puppies for sale?

"Like Mr Gambell we are concerned about the welfare of the dogs and want to catch the offender so they can be returned to their rightful owner as soon as possible."

Anyone with information about the dogs is asked to phone Sittingbourne Police Station on 01795 419182 or Kent Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555111, quoting crime number CY/3477/11.

AN OPEN meeting takes place on Friday to help propel plans forward for this year's inaugural Faversham Festival.

Organisers want to unite the town and surrounding villages in an annual gathering, with June 18-26 to be the first event.

Graham Gilbert, chairman of the organising committee explained: "Faversham has a fantastic variety of talent that is never collectively brought together and showcased for all to see.

"Our idea is to do just that. A festival by the people for the people.

"When we first had the idea last July, we were thinking of maybe a day or two. We had no idea if it would take off like it has.

"We contacted as many clubs, groups, societies, schools and individuals as we could about taking part. The response was fantastic.'

The committee has already got the support of Davington's Bob Geldof; former boxing champion from Dargate, Barry McGuigan; former EastEnder and Selling resident Shaun Williamson; as well as the likes of Sir David Melville, academic Frank Furedi and town mayor Anita Walker

The festival organisation committee is overseen by a four-man board, covering business, financial, legal and fund-raising. Together it forms the Faversham Festival Community Interest Company.

Now it hopes for even more support and involvement at Friday's meeting at the Faversham Guildhall. It takes place at 7.30pm and is open to anyone interested in the event.

 $\operatorname{Mr}$  Gilbert said: "The only thing we ask is that those taking part either live in the district, are part of an organisation in the district, or are sponsored by an individual or organisation within the district.

"At the first open meeting, over 50 people turned up and room was really buzzing.

"We then formed a committee to run alongside the CIC.

"We are now producing a calender of events split into days and parts of days. To date we have 12 evening concerts, seven exhibitions, drama in the Arden, drama in Boughton, workshops, daily music events in the centre of the town, events at the library and a host of village events.

"Many schools are holding their own events, from art exhibitions, photography exhibitions, fetes, local produce shows and musical events.

"On Sunday, June 26, the centre of Faversham will be closed off and we will have craft stalls. Preston Sreet will have musicians performing on the pavement, while Market Square and Court Street will have stages erected. There will also be fringe events in both Faversham and the villages.

A budget stands at between £25,000-30,000 and organisers are looking to recruit sponsors.

To date, some £10,000 has been

Mr Gilbert added: "We need all the support we can get. Financially yes, but also by organisations, businesses and individuals spreading the word.

"The festival is a celebration of our area. We hope to touch everybody in some way.

"It will generate income for the area and that income will stay in the

As part of the national campaign, the council is donating 10p for every new instruction received and is hoping to raise £2,500.

In addition to helping Marie Curie, everyone switching will be entered into a nationwide draw, and the winner will win a Renault Clio.

Existing direct debit payers need not re-apply. They will be automatically entered into the draw on the first payment date of their 2011-12 charge.

This campaign, which is being co-ordinated by BACS, will run throughout February, March and April.

Cllr Dewar-Whalley, Swale Borough Council's cabinet member for finance, said: "We aim to contribute £2,500 to the cause, while enabling Swale residents to budget better.

Police arrest illegal workers

ILLEGAL foreign workers have been arrested at two businesses on Sheppey after border control workers received an anonymous tip-off.

Immigration officers swooped on the Beano Café and the Shine on Hand Car Wash, both in the High Street, Sheerness.

Responding to the news, the town's councillor, Chris Foulds, said if it could happen on Sheppey, it could happen anywhere.
Three men from Turkey, Kosovo and Albania now face deportation.

The UK Border Agency said it will fine both businesses £10,000 per illegal worker, unless they prove they carried out all the necessary document checks.

Karen Dunning, head of the UK Border Agency's local immigration team for Kent, said: "Acting on information received, officers went to the Beano Café, and the Shine on Hand Car Wash in Sheerness, on March 3.

"After checking the immigration status of staff officers found one man from Turkey was working illegally at the Beano Café. He was arrested and is now in immigration detention pending his removal from the UK.

"At the Shine on Hand Car Wash, two members of staff, one from Kosovo and one from Albania, were found to be working illegally. "The Albanian man was arrested and remains in custody while his immigration application is decided. If the application is refused he will be removed from the UK.

"The Kosovan man was temporarily released on immigration bail and must now report regularly to the UK Border Agency while his immigration application is dealt with." Councillor Foulds said he was shocked by the news. He added: "Don't be complacent because we live on an island. This proves it can happen anywhere.

"Businesses must make sure they are doing the right thing and have taken the appropriate safeguards. We don't know what's round the corner.'

Ms Dunning refused to rule out future raids on the island. She said: "The message is clear for employers. We will not tolerate illegal working. It is a crime that not only undercuts local business, but also takes jobs from those who are allowed to work.

"It is the legal responsibility of all employers to check that staff have the right to work in the UK. There are simple ways for checking a foreign national's right to work and there are no excuses for not doing so."

Neither business was available for comment.

Disillusioned Anglicans look to Rome for tradition

CHURCHES have seen their congregations decimated this week after dissident Anglican priests and their parishioners turned to Rome.

Ash Wednesday marked the beginning of the exodus in both Sevenoaks and Tunbridge Wells, as worshippers opted instead to celebrate their first mass at Catholic churches.

In Tunbridge Wells, Father Ed Tomlinson led 70 worshippers to join St Anselm's Roman Catholic Church in Pembury, leaving a congregation of just 15 at his former church, St Barnabas.

Meanwhile, Father Ivan Aquilina took 40 parishioners with him to St Thomas' Roman Catholic Church in Sevenoaks, leaving 50 at the town's St John the Baptist Church

They join about 600 Anglicans nationally who have decided to leave the Church of England over liberal reforms such as the ordination of women bishops.

Pope Benedict XVI has created a body called the English Ordinariate, for Church of England traditionalists who want to switch allegiance to Rome while retaining some of their Anglican customs.

Father Tomlinson said: "The big day for us was last Sunday, when we said goodbye. Wednesday was the beginning of Lent and we are joining with the Catholic Church to celebrate that."

Tentative

He described this week's move as a "very quiet, tentative first-step" in preparing to convert to the Ordinariate for Holy Week at

The future of St Barnabas in Stanley Road looks bleak with just 15 Anglican parishioners

"It makes its viability very difficult," Father Tomlinson said. "One of the really sad things is that I proposed to the Church of England we might share the building and work together, but the Church of England has been a bit sore about that, so we're leaving with nothing.
"We've not changed what we teach, what has changed is the wider Church of England, who want to worship in a different way. It was a matter of standing up for what we believe in."

Father Aquilina spoke about his decision to leave the Church of England and his former church in Quaker's Hall Lane.

"The most important thing that moved me to join the Ordinariate is Jesus – I believe that we have to be faithful to what he said."

Speaking about the changes in the Church of England, he added: "The ordination of women to the priesthood is just part. It is a question of the unity of the church and not working together on important issues such as re-marrying divorcees and gay marriages. The Church of England is deciding, rather than talking with Christians to find a common decision.

£250m cost of getting our roads up to scratch

mariike.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

COUNTY Hall's highways chiefs have admitted it would take a one-off payment of £250 million to bring Kent's 5,000 miles of road up to standard.

But with £95m savings needed overall in the authority's budget for 2011/12 and a 20 per cent drop in the roads' money pot, Kent County Council has had to devise resourceful ways to ensure efficient maintenance of our pothole-ridden highways.

A KCC spokesman said the £250m was a one-off figure that would allow the authority to restore the county's roads, covering a wide range of works.

He stressed that if the money was spent, it would not include emergency works, but non-urgent, low-grade maintenance.

"If this sum were spent on our roads, they would still require between £50-60m annually to maintain," he said.

Leader of KCC Paul Carter told the BBC the authority was spending £40-£50m on roads - without an initial £250m blitz.

With mounting financial pressure and a reduction in Government grants of about 20 per cent for highways, the authority has had to come up with schemes to keep Kent's drivers moving.

Director of Kent Highway Services,

John Burr, said efforts were being concentrated through efficiency savings, contract control and smarter ways of working. This includes using pre-wet salting when gritting the roads, which involves spraying a saline solution on to salt as it is fired out, causing it to stick to the road surface and prevent it from being blown off.

Pair jailed for torture attack

TWO young women jailed for imprisoning and torturing a former friend during a horrific 18-hour attack after a row over a man have had their sentences upheld.

Georgia Fenn, 18, was subject to a brutal attack which included being scalded with boiling water mixed with sugar.

Lucy Viner-Mood, 22, and Lois Gibson, 18, both of Homewood Road, Langton Green, were sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court last year.

Viner-Mood was given a five-year jail term for false imprisonment and threeand-a-half years for assault occasioning actual bodily harm (ABH), to run concurrently. Her accomplice, Gibson, was sentenced to three years for false imprisonment and two years for ABH, also to run

Whale buried

THE 45-foot-long sperm whale washed up at Pegwell Bay in Ramsgate was cut up and removed last weekend.

Samples, including parts of its jawbone, have been taken away for further examination at the Natural History Museum, while the rest of the carcass has been buried in a landfill site

An on-site autopsy revealed the juvenile hadn't eaten for up to four days before it was washed ashore last week.

POT HOLES: Two winters of bad weather have wreaked havoc on roads across Kent

Growth retardants are also being used on grass verges so they require fewer cuts.

Mr Burr said smarter ways of working would help keep Kent moving and improve the 5,000-mile road network.

"Maintaining and improving the safety of our roads remains our top priority," he said.

"Further funds are also invested in preventative treatments. This type of investment helps reduce costs in the longer term.'

In January, a month-long pothole blitz was launched involving an army of tarmac firms fixing dangerous potholes across the county.

Last year a 'find and fix' campaign was rolled out to repair damage to roads caused

Over the next few weeks KCC will assess the damage caused to highways during the winter with a view to running a similar campaign this year.

Hero's return to finest hour

WING Commander Robert Foster DFC, of 605 Squadron, is one of the last surviving members of what Winston Churchill famously called 'The Few'.

He flew Hurricanes during the Battle of Britain and last weekend went along to the memorial to the aerial conflict on the cliffs at Capel le Ferne, where a replica Spitfire was being placed on display. It is a faithful rendition of the prototype of the famous warplane.

"I always enjoy coming here, it is very moving," he said. "I know there is a monument in London but this seems more relevant. It was in these skies and over the White Cliffs that the Battle of Britain was mainly fought."

the Battle of Britain was mainly fought."
Shortly before World War Two, Wing Cmdr
Foster learnt to fly with the Royal Air Force
Volunteer Reserve.

Called up for service in September, 1939, he completed his training and was posted to 605 Squadron, equipped with Hawker Hurricane fighters. By early September, 1940, he and his squadron were in the thick of the air fighting over southern England, operating from Croydon.

First sortie

"I flew my first operational sortie on September 7, the day the Blitz on London really started," he said.

"I remember firing into the enemy formations, but I don't think I hit anything.

"I do remember the first chap I shot down. We were bounced [attacked and surprised] by some ME109s [Luftwaffe fighters] who came out of the sun.

"My friend Charles English's aircraft was hit. He tried to get out but his parachute stuck and he didn't make it. I spun away and as I pulled out I could see a 109 right in front of me. I was behind him and he didn't see me, so I gave him a two or three second burst and he crashed."

Wing Cmdr Foster – then a Pilot Officer – usually intercepted attacking fighter and bomber formations over Sussex and would then frequently chase them across Kentish skies. He said he only remembers the war when he is asked about it – and during last year's 70th anniversary "it was all I was ever asked about".

However his recollections are extremely clear. "I remember once going after some ME110s [twin engine fighters] and my engine blew up – I thought I'd been hit," he said

"There was smoke and glycol [engine coolant] all over the place and later I found it was just a mechanical fault. I saw a large field and managed to get down on it – turned out to be Gatwick.

Bombed

"Another time I was running out of fuel and knew I wouldn't get home – so I put down at West Malling which had just been bombed. The people there were very upset with me. The commanding officer shouted at me: 'Get off – as soon as the Germans see a plane here they bomb us'. So I left – after getting my fuel, of course."

But not all air combat ended so safely. "We attacked some 109s over Maidstone and drove them off," Wing Cmdr Foster said. "But my squadron CO stuck around. Maybe he wanted to see if any of the enemy were still there. But he was attacked and shot down and died."

Surviving the battle, Wing Cmdr Foster joined 54 Squadron and later became an RAF instructor. His unit became part of a group sent out to Australia to help defend the Darwin area and engaged the Japanese incursions throughout 1943.

He finished the war with seven confirmed victories and three probables.

Awarded the DFC for his efforts, he returned to the UK and was given an assignment with an RAF public relations unit, ending up in Normandy within three weeks of the invasion of 1944.

Often serving right up in the frontline, Wing Cmdr Foster saw the war at very close hand, and then quite by chance became one of the first RAF officers to enter Paris with the liberating French army, and again by chance, was in General Charles de Gaulle's triumphant procession down the Champs-Élysées

Flood defence action 'vital to save coastline'

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

COASTAL experts have warned that preparations must be made now to prevent parts of Kent being lost to the sea forever.

According to new research by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation, the county's extensive coastline is one of the most at-risk areas in the UK, due to the expected rise in global sea levels and increased storm frequency over the next 90 years.

The study – Impacts of Climate Change on Disadvantaged UK Coastal Communities – comes just weeks after it was revealed that global warming played a part in causing the floods of 2000, that hit Maidstone and Tonbridge in particular.

Jeremy Richardson, director of the engineering consultancy URS-Scott Wilson, which co-authored the document said: "There's a need for a realistic debate on how to protect coastal regions because some tough choices are going to have to be made.

"We need to consider the risks, how we're going to spend the money, and what areas we must protect first.

"It would be great to start work on this straight away, but that's going to be terribly difficult to do until we get enough people who understand the full extent of the issues."

According to the Rowntree report, the parts of Kent on the Thames Estuary are most vulnerable to erosion, due to their low-lying and softsediment coasts.

Flooding

Increased rainfall is the main cause of concern for people living on the northern or western coastlines.

In 2009, the Environment Agency revealed that one in six homes in England is at risk of flooding from rivers, the sea or overflowing drains, and that investment in flood defences will need to almost double to £1 billion a year by 2035 to £1 billion a year by 2035.

However, the Government has slashed flood defence spending by more than 20 per cent to a figure of £529 million a year for the next four years.

Mr Richardson said: "The Coalition has said it realises how important flood defence is, but clearly the cuts leave us with a huge job to do.

"There is an increased number of tough decisions to make over the next few years, but we would still have these decisions without the credit crunch."

In March last year, emergency planners at Kent County Council drew up the county's most detailed flood response document ever.

The plan – which will be updated on KCC's intranet site – includes risk assessments, the role of the emergency services and which locations are most likely to flood. Opera Nights at Tudor Park, A Marriott Hotel & Country Club better chance of finding jobs.

SANDWICH MP Laura Sandys has made an impassioned plea to Government to push Pfizer to defer redundancies to give staff a better chance of finding jobs.

In a parliamentary debate on Monday, Ms
Sandys criticised the drugs giant for giving employees just 90 days to explore new work opportunities. Addressing science minister David Willetts, she called on the Government to speak to the company.

"Pfizer has been at Sandwich for 60 years, but has given its staff and the community just 90 days to readjust," she said.

Assets

"We know significant numbers of staff will be made redundant soon with little time for support to be put in place in terms of helping them set up businesses or identify investors who might want to buy some of the assets and keep those important jobs at the site in Sandwich.

"While I pay tribute to the local management who are trying to put in place new opportunities, they too have little time to ensure jobs stay before redundancies are

"This is a great disappointment, as there are some really exciting opportunities. The site and the staff have real potential."

Ms Sandys said more time was needed from Pfizer to give staff a chance to find new opportunities in the wake of the bombshell last month, when the drugs giant announced it would be pulling out of Sandwich, with the loss of 2,400 jobs.

Taking into consideration contractors at

She stressed that staff wanting to set up businesses will not have the time to get finances together or set up packages before the dispersal of employees begins.

"My husband and I separated last year. I was at a complete loss to know what to do. Whitehead Monckton were very caring and were able to help me arrange everything without us going to court. They also sorted out the mortgage and made sure I had a new will."

staff get 90 days to explore options and homes market awaits impact of closure

PFIZER'S decision to pull out of Sandwich could have repercussions for the east Kent property sector as well as the jobs market.

A law firm says it expects the drug giant's withdrawal and the loss of thousands of jobs to deflate the housing market at the top end. Senior partner at Fosters Law, Edward Foster, said although the lower end of the market would most likely remain stable, those in homes worth more than £250,000 could be forced to reduce selling prices.

forced to reduce selling prices. His warning followed the announcement by Pfizer that it was leaving Sandwich, putting at least 2,400 jobs at risk and raising concerns that many people would leave the area. Mr Foster, whose firm has offices in Broadstairs, Canterbury and Herne Bay, said: "If the market is suddenly filled with properties, prices will fall. It's demand and supply.

"Prices will be pushed down and properties in places such as Ash and Wingham, where it is usually more expensive to buy, will become more accessible.

"As soon as a large supply of properties enters the market it becomes a buyers' market. Pfizer employees may have to accept a lot less than what they raid for their properties."

less than what they paid for their properties." Mr Foster told KoS the impact would also affect rental homes where landlords would have to drop their charges.

"If you can get an executive four-bedroom house for £200 less, no-one is going to pay £200 more," he said.

Mr Foster said another effect could be employees 'downsizing' as a result of highlyskilled workers having to take lower-paid jobs.

"This would increase demand at the lower end of the market and this area, up to £250,000, would remain stable – supply and demand would balance out," he said. "It's people with homes priced above who will be most affected.

"Unless a quick solution is reached we could see an exodus of high-paid individuals and an increase in supply of properties for sale or rent; particularly those towns and villages around Sandwich and lages around Sandwich and Canterbury that make up the 'Pfizer corridor'. This is unlikely to result in a wholesale crash. Properties in the area offer great value. East Kent remains a great place to live and work.

"We have high-speed rail, excellent transport links and the Continent is a stone's throw away. We have a fantastic pool of talent and the quality of life is hard to beat. If that cannot attract inward investment, what can?"

Another property expert was not convinced

Pfizer's departure would push prices down or have a severe impact on the market. Steve Evans, associate director of Oakwood Homes, which has offices across east Kent, said he believed the market would remain stable.

However, he said Pfizer's decision could have an impact on people moving to the area.

"I'm not expecting a large impact in terms of prices – a lot depends on the time frame of the Pfizer situation," he said. "If we're looking at people leaving the area over two or three years, it's probably not going to have a big impact.

"However, people who may have been looking to make an aspirational move here for work may reconsider that," he said. "I think this will dampen demand."

SHUTDOWN: Pfizer's European R&D centre

"We can't stop Pfizer from leaving the site — it's their decision and their responsibility — but I'd like to ask the minister to help us with our discussions," she said.

"Tm not asking Pfizer to change their exit date, 2012 will be when they exit their activities in Sandwich, but that does not mean that they have to rush the redundancies now when so much has been put in place to mitigate the company's decision. Ninety days after 60 years. I'm not sure that is fair or reasonable. We need more time. The staff and contractors need more time and our east Kent economy needs more time."

Mr Willetts agreed with Ms Sandys that the 90-day period was a difficult prospect for staff.

"After 60 years of presence in the area, during which time researchers and staff have developed extraordinarily successful drugs, it is understandable the prospect of a 90-day process is very painful," he said.

Ms Sandys also called on the Government to back the creation of a life science centre at the Sandwich site and discussed the improvement of transport links to the facility.

Grammars 'not a step up ladder'

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

WORKING class children are no more likely to climb the social ladder by attending grammar schools instead of comprehensives, new research suggests.

Kent has more grammar schools than any other county in the UK, and is one of only a handful that still operates a selective system.

But using a sample of more than 3,300 adults from across the UK, academics from the universities of Oxford and Bath Spa found that poorer children who attended comprehensives were just as likely as their grammar school equivalents to land better jobs than their parents.

Maidstone resident Rebecca Matthews chairwoman of the Stop the Eleven Plus campaign group – said the findings of the report came as little surprise.

"It's an interesting piece of research, but the idea that grammar schools provide social

MYTH: Social mobility is not dependent on attending grammar school, research shows mobility is a complete myth anyway," she added.

"The researchers have used data from people who are now in their 50s, so when they went to school the whole country would have been using the selective system that Kent has held on to.

"The situation now is so different because even fewer working class children get to go to grammar school. Tutoring has a hugely significant effect on whether a child passes a test or not, and only middle class people can

Of the 3,300 people studied in the report, a third had attended comprehensive schools, a quarter had attended grammar schools, and two-fifths had been educated in a secondary modern.

The researchers compared the jobs the adults did at the age of 33 with the work their fathers had done 17 years earlier - they had climbed the social ladder.

All those sampled had sat a test to measure their academic ability at the age of 11. Co-author Adam Swift said that grammar schools "confer no more advantage" to working-class children than to those from slightly more wealthy backgrounds, which Gravesend-based education expert Peter Read said demonstrated the weakness of

"That is to say both categories do have an advantage," he said. "Why should they give more advantage to one group than the other?

Idealistic

"In fact, those of the sample who went to comprehensive schools were part of the initial wave of comprehensives, before the great abolition of grammar schools which took place in the 1970s and 80s.

"It is self-evident in nearly every wave of educational change that the first into the fray were idealistic and made it work, as this research shows. I wonder if the same results would hold true today."

Last year, a separate report by researchers at the University of Buckingham found that grammar schools were more socially-inclusive than many of the UK's best comprehensives.

It revealed that the highest-scoring comprehensives were far less likely to take their fair share of youngsters from disadvantaged homes than the 164 remaining grammars - 33 of which are in Kent.

Education takes priority over hols, says headmaster

A HEADTEACHER has rejected claims that poorer families who take their children on holiday during term-time are being discriminated against, writes Jill Hurst.

Nine primary school headteachers on the Isle of Sheppey say they will fine parents who take their children out of school to go on holidav.

Some parents have criticised the policy, claiming it will exclude many children from ever experiencing a holiday away.

But Alan Bayford, head of West Minster Primary school and chairman of the group of headteachers, said education had to be

He said: "We didn't make the rule. This is a Government guideline issued by the Department of Education.

"We decided we would follow the directive and issued a joint letter to all parents.

"While we appreciate many of our pupils are from very poor backgrounds, parents have a duty to their schooling. If they want to raise their children out of poverty, they need to get an education.
"I am positive the vast majority of parents value their children's education and will respond positively to the rule."

However, Gail Morris, whose step-daughter attends a Sheppey school, said: "Going away during the holidays is so much more expensive. It's often three times more than during term-time.

"We only ever went for a week or two. Like many other parents, we just won't be able to have a holiday now.

"They should concentrate on the kids hanging around the streets to get attendance levels up, not penalise us.'

Attendance at Sheppey schools is among the lowest in the country.

A system of holiday request forms has been withdrawn and families who want to take children out of school must now write to the headteacher and attend a meeting.

In cases of unauthorised absence, schools can instruct the educational welfare officer to issue a penalty notice leading to fines of

Non payment of fines or compliance with attendance policies can result in prosecution. Parents could then face financial sanctions, parenting orders or even prison

Gove to re-examine school building plans

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

EDUCATION chiefs have been given until April 11 to spell out the importance of restoring the axed Building Schools for the Future project in Kent.

Last month, Kent County Council defeated the Government in a joint legal action with five other local authorities after proving that Education Secretary Michael Gove failed to consult with them prior to scrapping the scheme last July.

The celebrated £55 billion project was introduced by Labour in 2003, in a bid to improve every secondary school in the Kent's overall programme - the largest building scheme in Europe – was worth an estimated £1.8bn.

Mr Gove has now given the authorities involved in the case until April 11 to provide him with "any and all" information about the axed BSF projects they would like him to reconsider.

KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter said: "I genuinely believe the Secretary of State is revisiting his decision in a comprehensive fashion, as we have been asked to provide a significant amount of new evidence and documentation.

"We are working with the 14 schools in Gravesham and Thanet that were the most advanced in terms of planning and development, to make sure the submission is as robust as possible. I am much encouraged."

Eleven Kent schools were rebuilt or refurbished through the BSF programme, but 40 others were told last July that the schemes they had been planning would no longer go

The 14 that will be reconsidered by Mr Gove were all 'Wave Four' projects that were at the most advanced stages of plan-

However, in a statement, Mr Gove made clear that he is under no obligation to save any of the schools affected by the removal of funding

He said: "I will make a decision having considered, with an open mind, all of the information gathered over the consultation period and with due regard to my equalities duties

"As the judge made clear, the final decision on any given school or project still rests with me and I may save all, some, a few or none." He concluded by saying that "no-one should gain false hope from this decision".

Mr Gove added that he would not be making direct contact with the affected schools.

He said: "Local authorities will want to engage with the schools and will provide the school-level information they consider necessary for me when making my decision.'

Tougher controls deter immigrants

STRINGENT border controls have driven down the number of illegal immigrants attempting to cross the Channel by two thirds - from 29,383 to 9.735 - in one year.

The decrease is being put down to the use of improved technology in northern French ports and the closure of refugee camps in Calais, sending out a message to would-be migrants that UK borders are closed.

Immigration minister and Ashford MP Damian Green said it had been made increasingly difficult for illegal immigrants to evade border controls and reach Britain.

"While the number of vehicles checked has remained stable at 1.5 million, annually, we have seen fewer attempts to cross the Channel illegally - with 9,700 individuals found last year, compared to just over 29,000 in 2009," he said.

"The increased joint working by the UK Border Agency and the French authorities at continues to ensure the UK's border remains protected."

Over the past five years, up until 2010, the number of illegal immigrants trying to enter the UK by crossing the Channel had risen year on year.

Between 2007 and 2008 a steep rise of almost 11,500 17,859 to 29,271 – was seen.

But in 2008 a new force was launched, in the form of the UK Border Agency, which saw HM Revenue and Customs, the Border and Immigration Agency and UK Visas team up to clamp down on immigrants attempting to enter the country illegally. Teams are stationed in Kent, Northern France and Belgium.

Using state-of-the-art heartbeat detectors and CO2 probes, officers have been able to detect thousands of illegal immigrants hoping to sneak through the borders.

Passive millimetre wave imaging, which works like an Xray machine - scanning vehicles and picking out different masses and shading - and sniffer dogs are also used.

At Calais, the Chamber of Commerce and Industry screens every vehicle.

Kent Tory MEP Richard Ashworth praised the tough border controls.

He said: "I would like to pay credit to the port authorities, Eurotunnel, the ferry operators and the haulage industry, who have all invested significant amounts of time and money into tackling this problem.

Project to revive tower

A PROJECT charting the history of the county is looking for people who remember a curious religious landmark.

The Kent Cultural Baton, which has been travelling through Kent, is heading to Gillingham and is looking for residents who remember Jezreel's Tower.

The building, which stood on the A2 at Chatham Hill, is the latest focus for the project, which has been recording stories as part of the cultural celebrations in the build-up to the 2012 Olympics.

Residents who remember the landmark building are invited to visit Gillingham Pier for the Party on the Pier celebrations this Saturday, to share their memories

The Kent Cultural Baton is working with artist Simon Barker, who is making a film about the cubic temple built in 1885. The building was being used as a storage facility for the Co-Operative when it was By MATHEW BEECH demolished in 1961, and the last remaining building associated with Jezreel's Tower, in Canterbury Street, was razed to the ground in late 2008.

Jezreel's Tower was built by James Jershom Jezreel, formally known as James Roland White. He joined and took over a small branch of the Christian Israelites religious sect in 1814.

Once he had completed his military service in 1881, White, now using the name Jezreel, decided his church needed a headquarters and a temple, which was to be built on Chatham Hill – the area's highest point.

The design was inspired by Revelation XXI, 16: "And the city lieth foursquare, and the length thereof is as great as the breadth . the length and the breadth and the height thereof are equal."

Inspired by this, Jezreel wanted to create a perfect cube, with sides 144ft long, but was persuaded by architects to create the building with a 124ft square base and a height of 120ft.

The tower was finished with yellow bricks and eight castellated towers.

Engraved on to the outside of the tower were a trumpet and flying roll, crossed swords of the spirit and the Prince of Wales feathers, representing the Trinity.

Eccentric

The architectural oddity is one of 26 landmark buildings featured in a new book examining British eccentricity, David McKie's Bright Particular Stars: A Gallery of Glorious British Eccentrics.

Following Jezreel's death in 1885, his wife took over control of the sect and the building project, but this came to an end in 1888, when she also died. The unfinished building was put up for sale in 1897 and failed to find a buyer for six years.

rent parts of the building, but in 1905, they fell behind with the rent and the tower's owners repossessed it.

The holding company began the demolition of the tower in this year, but when the contractors went bankrupt, the tower remained in derelict until 1961, when it was demolished.

People back port plan referendum

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

A GROUNDBREAKING plan to transfer Dover Port into the hands of the community has taken a giant leap forward after the public voted for a referendum on the issue.

A meeting at Dover Town Hall last Thursday saw standing room only, as residents packed out the building to have a say on the future of the port.

Members of Dover People's Port Trust (DPPT) explained the details of the purchase bid, and the motion as to whether a referendum should go ahead was passed. The vote, which will look at whether the port should be transferred into the community's control, will take place within the next 25 days. Chairman of DPPT Neil Wiggins said he was thrilled with the outcome, and urged people to turn out for the next vote.

"The result of the referendum is not binding on Government, but if there is a large turnout and strong vote for transferring the port to the community, it will put pressure on them," he said. "Given their flagship policy of the big society and more power in the community, I think government would find it very hard to ignore such a high level of feeling and response to the People's Port."

DPPT hopes to buy the Port of Dover with

Dover MP Charlie Elphicke, who is behind

PUT TO VOTE: The public are to decide on whether to bid for Dover Port the proposals, said residents can join the trust for  $\pounds 10$ . The remainder of the funds would come from City of London institutions.

Rivals Dover Harbour Board (DHB), which has run the port as a trust since 1606, asked the Government in January, 2010, for permission to privatise the asset

But the move sparked fierce opposition, and plans were drawn up to create a community-owned port which has received wide-spread support, including backing from forces' sweetheart Dame Vera Lynn.

DHB, however, called the proposals "unrealistic and undeliverable".

A spokeswoman said the board remained convinced its own scheme represented the best and only option for a sustainable and growing port business.

"Properly costed, economically viable and deliverable, we look forward to a positive decision by the minister as we continue to work towards a new and transformational relationship with our stakeholders," she said.

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

ENGLISH Heritage launched a Save our School Trips campaign, to stop the ailing tradition becoming another casualty of the downturn.

It follows a 14 per cent drop in the number of class excursions to Kent's historic sites over the last four years, caused by schools being unable to justify transport costs, and teachers' concerns over the "risk assessment culture".

According to research by English Heritage, 94 per cent of teachers support school trips as a valuable tool to enrich topics covered in the classroom, but three quarters see transport expenses as one of the main obstacles.

This could mean a generation of children missing out on the memorable experience of excursions and the knowledge they bring.

In a bid to save the age-old school trip English Heritage is offering 50 per cent towards transport costs to one of its historic sites in Kent, for the first three learning groups to book a visit.

The offer includes Dover, Deal and Walmer castles; Down House - the home of Charles Darwin - near Orpington; and one of the country's most important Roman villas, at Lullingstone, near Dartford.

Fran Lashmar, English Heritage educa-tion manager for the South East, said she believed missing out on school trips would have a negative effect on education.

Active learning

"This isn't just in history, but art, drama, geography and across the whole curriculum," she said.

"Ninety per cent of us will remember more through active learning; it allows students of all abilities to put their studies into context in a way simply not possible in the classroom.

"Our heritage is for everyone, and we see offering schools free access to our sites as the way to break down stereotypical barriers for those students who would not normally have the opportunity to visit.
"For some children, this is the only

Sunlight sparks blaze at home

A DOG and cat had to be rescued from a burning building after a bizarre blaze was sparked in Gillingham.

Fire crews sent to put out the flames on Monday afternoon believe it was started when sunlight reflected by a vanity mirror caused clothing to catch light.

Two engines from Medway Fire Station were sent to tackle the incident at about 2.15pm after neighbours heard a smoke alarm and saw smoke coming from the house.

Crews tackled the blaze in a first-floor bedroom and rescued the pets from the property. The fire was extinguished within half an hour, damaging up to 20 per cent of the room.

Crew manager Nina Batsford said: "It appears that sun through the window had been reflected on to clothing and caused a fire. It's a good reminder to people to think carefully about where they place mirrors.

POLICE are appealing for witnesses after a woman in her 30s was killed on the M20.

The woman was on the carriageway and died after she was hit by a passing vehicle.

It is not yet clear how the woman came to be on the motorway.

Kent Police's Serious Collision Investigation

Unit is continuing to appeal for witnesses following the incident at about 8.20pm on Sunday, just south of junction 10 at Ashford.
All three lanes were closed between junction 10 and 11 while investigators were at the scene. The motorway was re-opened at about 7am on Monday.

Ms Lashmar said with the new campaign some schools will now also be able to save money on transport costs, which can often reach hundreds of pounds.

"Teachers and schools are under so much pressure," she said. "They lost the Building Schools for the Future funding and there are other cuts being made through back door.

Post Office staff vote for strike

POST Office clerks have voted to go on strike in a dispute over pay and job security, writes Steve Knight.

The industrial action, which could take place this month, affects about 100 Kent counter staff in Crown branches as opposed to privately-run sub-post offices or franchises such as WH Smith.

About 95 per cent of the county's workers voted in favour of going on strike when they were balloted by the Communication Workers' Union last week.

The union says members have been denied a pay rise for the third year running, despite increased profits at Post Office Ltd (POL) of £72 million last year, with managers winning a 2.25 per cent raise and directors an extra 21 per cent in pay and benefits.

"POL is showing callous indifference to the work and living standards of hard-working counter staff," said CWU represen-tative for Kent, Mole Meade.

"I'm optimistic we won't have to go ahead with the strike. It would be foolhardy to not get back round the table and discuss a meaningful pay rise for people who haven't had one for three years.

Guarantee

The Kent counter staff were among 4,000 CWU members across 373 offices nationwide who were asked to vote for or against industrial action. The union claims POL is also refusing to extend a guarantee on the number of Crown offices – which provide a full range of services including tax discs and passports – which it says implies further closures are planned.

CWU deputy general secretary Dave Ward said: "This is about more than pay. The job security of members and future of the Crown office network is also at stake.

"We want a strong network of Crown offices, but the Government and the company appear to be hiding the fact that they are planning a programme of further closures.
"Given the lack of support from Government, we fear for the future of the

According to POL, the Crown office network is losing £55 million a year and cannot afford to offer counter staff a pay rise.

A spokesman said: "Post Office is disappointed that staff have voted in favour of strike action.

"Ninety-seven per cent of Post Offices are run by sub-postmasters and will be unaffected by any industrial action.

"Deliveries are also unaffected by this ballot result."

Chimney warning

THE cold snap has seen an increase in chimney fires as residents turn to open fires and wood-burning stoves.

Firefighters issued safety advice, urging people to ensure chimneys are swept to prevent a build-up of soot and residue.

Crews attended 13 chimney fires throughout the county in the last week. Blazes broke out in Pembury, Sissinghurst, Paddock Wood, Edenbridge, Headcorn and Langton Green.

A fire service official said: "It has been a long, cold winter and we urge those with open fires and wood-burning stoves to get chimneys swept and flues checked."

There were also fires in Ashford, East Malling and Upnor. In the east of the county, firefighters attended calls in Westgate, Sandgate, Whitstable and Ramsgate.

MILLIONS of bugs will help make the River Medway cleaner than ever. The bugs are part of an upgrade at Ham Hill wastewater treatment works in Snodland, and eat away at contaminants, such as ammonia.

The bugs grow inside 22-metre diameter tanks, which the wastewater trickles through during the final treatment stage.

About 12 million litres of wastewater flow through Ham Hill treatment works each day in dry weather, rising to 30 million litres a day in wet weather.

Call to tackle HGV blind spot dangers

A CAMPAIGN aimed at reducing the number of crashes caused by HGVs has received strong backing from Europe.

Some 323 MEPs signed a declaration calling on the European Commission to review old laws they claim fail to tackle problems with lorry drivers' blind spots, which has led to hundreds of fatalities on the roads.

It comes in response to the national Save Me See Me campaign, which was launched by the family of 30-year-old Eilidh Cairns, who died in 2009 after being hit by a lorry in London on her way to work. The campaign is pushing for mandatory cameras and sensors to improve visibility.

Kent MEP Peter Skinner has put his weight behind the campaign, saying the problem in the county was particularly bad. He said: "This heightens the pressure on law-makers in Brussels to look again at how we can prevent these needless tragedies. By fitting lorries with sensors, cameras and better brakes, cyclists and pedestrians will become more visible and drivers will be able to react more quickly in an emergency.

"Lorry drivers want to be as safe as possible. Blind spots not only affect the safety of other road users, but their safety as well. Making the streets safer for all road users must be a priority.

Thousands of lorries travel on Kent's roads every day, particularly on the M20 and M2, with the Port of Dover handling 1.8 million every year. Two years ago, 58-yearold Pierre Foulkes, from Deal, was killed outside the Eastern Docks in a collision with an HGV while on his bike. The same year a twoyear-old was seriously injured when his buggy was struck by a lorry in Margate. His sister and grandmother were also hurt.

Strong

An investigation is also under way into the death of a female driver in a collision involving a lorry in Cranbrook last month.

Kate Cairns, the sister of Eilidh, said: "This is an international problem but a simple thing such as cameras would help. Eilidh was familiar with her route to work and an experienced and strong cyclist. But she ended up under the wheels of a truck.

"Drivers are isolated in their cabs with massive blind spots all around. Cameras are essential.

THE devastated family of a man killed by a single punch say they know the identity of his killer and have appealed to the community to help bring him to justice.

Police fear it is only a matter of time before the "violent thug" hurts someone again. However, frustrated officers do not have enough evidence make a charge.

Adrian Milner, 48, was punched in the face as he left the New Inn pub and headed home with friend Michael Coomber along Church Road, Murston, just before 8pm on Tuesday, December 28, 2010.

Force

The force of the punch caused him to fall to the floor and he hit the back of his head. He was taken to a neurological hospital in London, but doctors were unable to save the father of two. He died on January 9.

Andy Clarke was Mr Milner's best friend for more than 40 years. He said: We know who did this and we are absolutely positive people close to the person responsible know he did it."

Mr Milner's family, including partner Gemma Stuttard, are still struggling to come to terms with what has happened. Speaking to Adrian's killer, Gemma pleaded: "Do the right thing and hand yourself in."

And to those who may have information she added: "No matter how small or irrelevant you may think the information is, please come forward."

Mandarin lessons boost for toddlers

By JILL HURST

iill.hurst@kosmedia.co.uk

CHILDREN as young as two years old are being taught to speak Mandarin at a nursery.

Little Learners, based in Loose, Maidstone, is providing Chinese language tuition to 17 children aged between two and five. Manager Hayley Oliver said the choice of language was based on the growing need for Chinese speakers from the western world combined with an interesting and vibrant culture.

"China is one of the fastest growing economies in the world and will play a big part in the future lives of our children," she

"Many schools offer German, French or Spanish, but we feel Mandarin has a lot to

"It's important for children to speak a second language and the younger they start, the easier it is to pick up. At nursery age children's brains are like a sponge, ready to soak everything up."

A native Mandarin speaker visits the nursery for two hours each week, making use of an array of visual props and aids to stimulate the children's interest.

Mrs Oliver said: "We use all sorts of visual aids including posters, teddies, books and an abacus to help them to learn to count.

According to Mrs Oliver, most of the chil-learning about Chinese culture

dren already have the basics including counting to six and saying 'hello' and 'goodbye'.

The nursery has also embraced the Chinese culture, celebrating New Year and the country's zodiac system, which relates each year to an animal.

Mrs Oliver, a former teacher, says the lessons will prove invaluable to the children when they progress through the New Line Learning Academy, which Mandarin on its teaching syllabus.

China is now home to one of the world's most important economies and more people speak Chinese than any other language in the world.

Sickened by free lunches

I was incensed to read that Kent's county councillors had voted to retain their free lunches during full council meetings, at a cost of £12.50 a head.

This costs a total of £1,050 for each meeting, or £7,350 for the seven meetings held in a year. They say the freebies are crucial to the "social atmosphere" of their meetings. This is at a time when they will be making budget cuts of millions of pounds and axing 1,500 jobs.

I find it disgusting that they feel they are justified in spending an amount on seven days' lunches. That is more than a lot of pensioners have to live on for a year.

To say that it is crucial to the social atmosphere is an insult to council taxpayers. We are not pay-ing for them to socialise, but to provide good services for the best value. The story also says councillors already get an allowance to cover meals, so surely they should pay for their own lunches out of that.

Party to show Kentish pride

The day of the royal wedding, April 29, is a public holiday and there will be no school that day.

The weather should be warm enough for street celebrations.

This is a once-in-a-generation event. The entire length of Kent's pedestrianised streets should be given over to parties.

It will be fun for the children, but also a wonderful opportunity to publicise tourist sites, attract visitors and sell goods on the day. We could get children up to the age of 13 seated, and older children can serve the younger ones. For this to work, there will need to be sponsors to donate food and drinks; organisations to lend chairs and tables; volunteers to organise; buses to be diverted; parking to be laid on.

All local politicans and organisations should pull together on this one. Get a street party licence and forge ahead with it.

Let's show the country what Kent can do. As a boy who waved a Union flag at the Queen on Coronation Day, I would like this very much.

Geoffrey Clark, secretary Ukip, Dartford and Gravesham

Charity should begin at home

When will our leaders face up to the fact that with all the cuts we are having to endure we will soon be poorer than the countries we give foreign aid to.

It's about time somebody in the Government realised that if we stopped foreign aid for a year Britain would be out of debt. Why do we have to suffer? Surely looking after one's own country should be the first priority? I don't think anybody could argue against that.

OPINION: BUOYED BY THE FIGHTBACK

UK Independence Party leader NIGEL FARAGE says EU fishing policy is still dead in the water, despite the promised changes on scandalous 'discards'

NE of the greatest betrayals on joining the EEC in 1973 was towards the British fishing industry. Our fishermen, over the years, have have had to cope with a quota system arbitrarily imposed by Brussels in the name of 'conservation'.

The European Union's own estimate is that 40 per cent of all fish caught is dumped - dead back into the sea. Over a million tonnes a year of fish wasted, while across the world we have starvation and in this country we have a fishing industry on the brink of destruction.

From a traditional, buoyant and healthy industry managing some of the richest fishing grounds in the world, UK fishing and associated industries have been devastated by the EU's Common Fisheries Policy; its fishing fleets deliberately and methodically destroyed, its ports and related support structures turned into ghost ports, with British coastal waters now just part of the 'common' waters. We can map this decline in Kent with our own once-thriving fishing towns of Dover, Folkestone, Dungeness and Ramsgate among the many whose townsfolk relied on the sea

British fishermen numbered in the tens of thousands in the 1960s, but by 2007 the UK only had 13,000 left. This has continued to decline. On top of this, the policy has added £200 a year to the family food bill which, at a time of cuts and austerity, is shameful.

Even the European Commission admits the CFP has failed. Eighty-eight per cent of fish stocks are overfished, while 30 per cent are outside safe biological limits, meaning they cannot reproduce as normal.

Following the Hugh's Fish Fight campaign by TV chef Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall, aimed at ending 'discards', the EC called a meeting of fisheries ministers to announce a series of changes. I attended this meeting to listen to the proposals on a topic on which I have been campaigning for more than a decade. Before the meeting, the British minister, Richard Benyon, told me he assumed we'd be on the same side. I had to disagree – I don't think it is the place of a Greek politician, fisheries commissioner Maria Damanaki, to make laws on our national resources

Every year, rounds of horse-trading take place in Brussels to decide fishing quotas. These are being reduced year-on-year, resulting in a situation where some fishermen, particularly those who operate smaller boats, cannot make a living.
Of course I'm delighted that after 28 years we may see an end to discards. The fact that we have been throwing millions of tonnes of fish back into the sea is an outrage. As one of the million anglers in the UK, I have been appalled at not only the impact on the environment but on our fishing industry and the damage wreaked on it by civil servants ignorant of this way of life. But for those who think this change will be a quick one, or one which will instantly breathe life into our beleaguered fishing industry, I'm afraid I don't share that confidence.

Hugh himself said that British fishermen will "feel the pinch". This may well have been the case if the industry was thriving, but in 2011 it's almost dead in the water. Rather than this gradual approach to ending discards and quotas, Ukip favours abandoning all quotas and strictly forbidding discards. We should follow the example of the Norwegians, who fish their own waters without discards by managing fishing effort.

Despite all-party criticism of the CFP, Ukip is the only party with the opportunity to restore British fishing to its former glory in a meaningful and practical manner.

The UK is in a prime location for creating some of the finest fishing grounds in Europe, if not the world. If managed correctly, these will last for ever, but I fear it will take more than a celebrity campaign and politicians motivated by spin to take the action needed to ensure we don't sound the final toll for the fishing industry in this country. For Kent, with its rich history, it will breathe new life into our communities.

• Ukip leader Nigel Farage is a South East MEP. He lives in Westerham, near Sevenoaks.

Lecturing on the merits of action

THE threat of strike action by workers from a variety of professions is yet further proof of what a sorry state our economy is in.

Post Office counter staff and lecturers at the University of Kent are the latest to voice their support for industrial action and it's likely the police would join them too, if they were allowed.

And while workers from different professions all have their own reasons for wanting to go on strike, it has become quite clear that money - or rather the lack of it is the root of all evil as far as they are concerned.

In regards to the lecturers in particular, these must be surreal times.

As opposed to when postmen or rubbish collectors go on strike, only a small percentage of the population – students – are actually affected by anything university lecturers do.

Therefore they have little option but to target the very people they have devoted their lives to helping.

It can be easy to criticise union representatives for downing tools when they don't get their own way, but we all have our own reasons for making a stand against things that affect us personally.

There are likely to be many strikes, marches and rallies over the next few months and years, but only time will tell if any of them make a blind bit of difference.

NOT only have we gained an extra bank holiday from the wedding of Prince William and Kate Middleton, we now have a new drink to enjoy as well.

Moodley's Royal Match - described as an elegant and tasteful" beer that reflects the characteristics of the happy couple – will go down well on a warm April afternoon.

But whether anyone will care - or even remember - what they are drinking by the end of the party is something else entirely.

Riposte to your glorified writer

I was dismayed by your Comment regarding supply teachers (March 6).

Supply staff may be expensive to a school, but very few people realise the amount of pay for a supply teacher is based on a regular teacher's annual salary and they would only receive the same amount if they worked every school day.

So far this tax year, I have earned £9,000, having been available for employment every working day.

Supply work is definitely drying up as schools increasingly use unqualified staff to teach children.

How many parents realise their children are being taught by teaching assistants and cover supervisors?

I believe the latter may be the "glorified babysitters" you refer to. I can certainly understand that teaching assistants obviously know the children and the curriculum, but they are not qualified teachers.

Supply teachers, as many pupils and parents do not realise, are fully qualified teachers, who have held permanent teaching positions in schools, sometimes for many years, as in my experience.

"In these tough economic times" as you write, it does not help to denigrate someone who is struggling to make a living and after years of teaching to be called a "glorified babysitter".

Bank on more trouble ahead

Chancellor George Osborne's statement that he is going to set up 10 enterprise zones in the North and the Midlands to stimulate growth is truly an admission that his present economic policies are an abject failure.

Ten zones north of London may just, in part, help those 10 areas but will certainly confine the rest of the country and undoubtedly Folkestone, to recession or even

Here in Folkestone we have had Tory or Lib Dem run councils for decades, but enterprise is the last think they have helped generate. Far from growth, we have had decline upon decline and now in certain wards of the town have rapidly rising joblessness, with 25 per cent youth unemployment on top.

Margaret Thatcher and John Major – with their mace-wielding hero Michael 'Tarzan' Hestletine – set up 38 enterprise zones between 1981 and 1996, yet we still had three million unemployed, 15 per cent inflation and a decimated manufacturing base under the

Mr Osborne is just repeating the same old failed window dressing of the past.

Sure, the Chancellor has stated that we should never again rely upon the banks and financial services to grow the economy, but that in itself flies in the face of his own Governor of the Bank of England, Mervyn King, who on the very same day let the cat out of the bag and warned of a second banking crisis in the UK unless the banks are reformed and stopped from putting profits and bonuses before people and industry.

Something this Government has patently failed to do.

We must though give the Chancellor credit for promising to reform the planning laws in the Entreprise Zones to allow speedier decisions for commerce and industry and to encourage entrepreneurs to invest without the risk of being tied up in lengthy and highly expensive local planning inquiries.

Pity this message did not get through to his colleagues in Cabinet responsible for calling in the Lydd airport planning applica-tion now costing us all millions in legal fees, council tax and lost opportunities.
Then Folkestone and Shepway are never destined to be enterprise zones under a Coalition Government that would rather preserve the district as a retirement zone for the gentlefolk of the Big Society than as an area of growth and prosperity for our children and generations to come.

Donald Worsley, Folkestone

problems, they start looking to make a name for themselves abroad

So the Archbishop of Canterbury ignores his decaying Church and tries to interfere in matters that are not really his concern.

Thanks to the continual dilution of Christ's message, the adoption of pagan teachings and the desire to do man's will rather than God's, Dr Rowan Williams has not only assisted the drift towards a more secular and soon to be Godless society, but presides over a Church which is crumbling beneath him, as his bishops leave for what they think are greener pastures

He should be attending to the spiritual dearth in his Church as his flocks become, "skinned and thrown about like sheep without a shepherd" [Matthew 9:36].

He should be more concerned at his lack of defence of the Christian faith, which is under attack as it has never been before, as more and more Christians are persecuted for their beliefs.

Instead, he does anything other than reinforce Christ's teachings, anything other than teach Biblical truths, anything other than give a spiritual lead in a very spiritually dark world. He is neither one thing or another, and as God said in Revelation 3:15-16, "Because you are lukewarm and neither hot nor cold, I am going to vomit you out of my mouth".

His Church cannot stand. Phil Granger, West Malling

Quite often we see war graves on television and I have to wonder why all those people died for our freedom when someone comes along and sells us down the river. That is an insult to all of those people, and not letting us have a say in staying or leaving the EU is an insult to the whole country.

He promised, amongst the many promises he has broken, some sort of a referendum about Europe, but the only promise he has kept so far is the one he made to Nick Clegg and that is one the country does not want.

Flooding caused by overpopulation

Here we go again. Steve Dawe of Kent Green Party belongs to the school that believes if you repeat anything enough times, it must make it true.

The latest is that recent flooding provides conclusive irrefutable proof of man-made global warming. Never mind that flooding occurred before the Industrial Revolution, before the world was so overpopulated and even covered the whole earth during the time of Noah, thousands of years ago.

The main contribution we have made to flooding is the concreting and asphalting over of vast areas of land that once used to the real problem of overpopulation. Phil Granger, West Malling Animal lovers can

We're calling on readers to lend a hand at the RSPCA. The Kent West, Ashford and Dover, branches are searching for the volunteer stars of the future to help out with tasks, which go much further than dog walking and cat cuddling.

We are looking for people who can help out with all aspects of the charity's operation at a local level ranging from fundraising, assisting in the shops and customer service and having a say in key decisions as a branch trustee.

We hope that these opportunities will benefit the volunteers as well. Many of the tasks we need help with could help people struggling to find work to gain employment, or give school leavers and recent graduates that all-important work experience.

The RSPCA is a charity and receives no Government funding. It relies on members of the public to continue encouraging kindness and preventing cruelty to animals.

Experience is not necessary for many of the tasks, so whatever your forte, there should be something for you.

If your readers are interested in getting involved, they can contact the RSPCA enquiries team on 0300 1234 555, log on to www.rspca.org.uk or contact their local branch.

Check the rules on campaigning

On Thursday, May 5, voters will decide who represents them in local elections across England. There will also be a referendum on whether we use the 'first past the post' or 'alternative vote' system to elect MPs to the UK Parliament. Many of your readers will want to get involved in campaigning in the referendum and elections.

This could be by setting up a campaign group, standing as a candidate or starting a political party.

Anyone who wants to get involved should be aware that there are rules. These are set out at ww.electoralcommission.org.uk/guidance and I'd encourage everyone hoping to play an active role in the campaigns to check the rules.

Reforms overlook autism needs As a supporter of the National Autistic Society

living in the area, I am extremely concerned about the Government's Disability Living Allowance (DLA) reforms.

The reforms mean people with autism will have to undergo a stringent face-to-face assessment to claim this vital benefit. Autism is a 'hidden' disability and unless assessors have specific training in the condition, it is very likely the needs of people with autism will be misunderstood or overlooked.

I would like to appeal to our local MP to bring this issue to parliament in line with the National Autistic Society's Who Benefits? campaign, which puts forward the following four points aimed at protecting society's most vulnerable:

• People shouldn't have to go through a faceto-face assessment if they already have sufficient evidence about their autism from previous assessments

• People with autism experience a variety of difficulties with daily life. The Government must make sure that these are reflected in the new assessment.

· Assessors must be trained so that they understand autism and how to talk to someone with autism, and can make a fair assessment of that person's needs

• The Government must not abolish the mobility component of DLA for people living in residential care

I urge others in the area to take action now, by visiting www.autism.org.uk/whobenefits. Isabelle Owen, Headcorn

Throwing good money after bad

I am appalled to read of Kent County Council's bid for £10m to the Regional Growth Fund, to support the construction of a rail station at Thanet Parkway, with the support of Roger Gale, one of our MPs.

This would subsidise a commercial airline operator to encourage it to fly from Manston airport to Europe.

A number of things trouble me about this: Far from being transparent, KCC is unwilling to release any details about this bid for public money to support a private company (and a company, moreover, that pays its taxes in New Zealand). Surely this is against the Conservative's public policy of more transparency in government?

A few years ago KCC headed a group of

Remake that hit spirit of the age

TRUE GRIT (15)

ONCE among the most popular movies genres around, the Western now occupies rather a niche in the market-place.

But every so often the standard subjects of revenge, redemption, love, honour and betrayal set against a magnificent backdrop of desert, mountain, forest and river make a triumphant return.

Nominated for 10 Oscars this year, True Grit actually came away with none - which to me was a major shame.

Acting, cinematography, direction and even the soundtrack are all fantastic and surely one statuette could have recognised that fact Written and directed by the Coen brothers,

True Grit is taken from the novel by Charles Portis, though since the classic 1969 John Wayne Western was adapted from the same book, it's also a remake.

Leading the acting honours is Hailee Steinfeld, who stars as feisty 14-year-old - her actual age – Mattie Ross.

After showing her horse-trading skills to raise funds, she recruits boozing, one-eyed US Marshal Rooster Cogburn (Jeff Bridges) to help track down her father's killer, outlaw Tom Chaney (Josh Brolin).

In a fine screen perfomance she manages to be, by turns, assertive, innocent, courageous and naïve, which is as wide a range of emotions as most actresses manage in an entire career.

As the plot unfolds, despite Mattie's objections, Cogburn is joined by self-assured Texas Ranger LaBoeuf (Matt Damon), who's pursuing Chaney for a different crime - the killing of a senator in the Lone Star State.

But when the pair set off without her, Mattie shows her own true grit by riding through a river to accompany them. The three then head deep into Indian territory, believing Chaney to have joined an outlaw gang headed by Lucky Ned Pepper (Barry Pepper).

Jeff Bridges, who lost out on a best-actor Oscar, is thoroughly convincing - and seems to know how to play a drunk on screen.

He said after the film: "The big secret is that you don't want to get drunk for real. I made that mistake early in my career. I did a dance scene in which I was supposed to be drunk. So I decided to have some screwdrivers... it was fine for the scene, that was beautiful, but what about the next scene? And the next day when you have to get up early?"

Matt Damon is equally good and the setpiece gunfights are brilliantly staged, although I'm never convinced that 19thcentury handguns were ever as accurate in real life as they are on screen.

The dialogue sparkles, but possibly that which most resonates with the great Westerns of the golden age is the filming of the aweinspiring, majestic American-frontier landscape - whether vast plains and mountain vistas, a lonely cottage on a hillside, the star-filled sky, or a steam locomotive snorting its way into a town. Wonderful... as ever.

HALL PASS (15)

THERE was undeniably something about Mary back in 1998 when writer-directors Bobby and Peter Farrelly stamped Ben Stiller's credentials as a leading man and provided a classic gross-out moment with mis-

Seemingly, this was the siblings' peak.

Their new potty-mouthed battle of the sexes, Hall Pass, takes an off-kilter premise – two wives grant their men a week's grace to sleep with as many women as they want – as the starting point for 105 minutes of halfhearted soul-searching and vulgarity.

Maggie (Jenna Fischer) and (Christina Applegate) are sick and tired of their husbands Rick (Owen Wilson) and Fred (Jason Sudeikis) ogling other women and behaving like idiots.

So at the suggestion of their friend Dr Lucy (Joy Behar), an advocate of reactance theory – the notion that if you limit someone's choices, they will rebel and choose what they cannot have – the women grant their spouses 'hall passes' for one week.

Rick and Fred hit the town with pals Gary (Stephen Merchant), Hog Head (Larry Joe Campbell) and Flats (JB Smoove) in tow, promising seven days of carnal pleasure.

Meanwhile, Maggie and Grace leave town with the children and babysitter Paige (Alexandra Daddario), and find some pleasing distractions of their own: namely college baseball coach Rick (Bruce Thomas) and bighitting protege, Gerry (Tyler Hoechlin).

Hall Pass boasts a couple of hearty guffaws, but for the most part our response is merely weak smiles.

Despite prominent placing in TV ads and on posters, Merchant features only fleetingly and is completely sidelined from the second half of the film, reappearing only during the end-credits. Thank goodness for Fischer and Applegate, who are luminous and sweeten this otherwise bitter and twisted pill.

Like relationship comedy The Dilemma, Hall Pass suffers from a major credibility problem with the pairings of the central characters. The men are artless, unsympathetic schmucks who have somehow managed to walk down the aisle with intelligent, feisty and sexy women.

It's no wonder the male characters end the film on an emotional high, realising how lucky they are to have such amazing wives.

We feel a twinge of hope that all of the emotional upheaval will compel the women to make appointments with a divorce lawyer. Now that would be a happy ending.

FAIR GAME (12A)

IN July 2003, former UN weapons inspector Dr David Kelly killed himself after a highprofile appearance before the Foreign Affairs Select Committee to answer questions about the so-called 'dodgy dossier' of evidence about weapons of mass destruction.

On the other side of the Atlantic at the time, CIA operations officer Valerie Plame was caught in the eye of a media storm after her own government had seemingly blown her cover to discredit her husband, who had been highly critical of the Bush administration.

She became a focal point for the anger and confusion of a nation struggling to understand the decision to invade Iraq based on apparently flawed intelligence data.

Plame endured trial by media and her husband, former ambassador Joseph Wilson, chronicled their ordeal in his 2004 book, The Politics Of Truth: Inside The Lies That Led To War And Betrayed My Wife's CIA Identity: A Diplomat's Memoir.

She followed suit three years later with her versions of events, Fair Game: My Life As A Spy, My Betrayal By The White House.

Doug Liman, director of The Bourne Identity and Mr & Mrs Smith, relives the fraught period in this dialogue-heavy thriller adapted from the memoirs by Jez and John-Henry Butterworth.

In the film, Valerie (Naomi Watts), whose CIA status is unknown to almost her entire circle of family and friends, is caught in the crossfire when her husband Joe (Sean Penn) writes a scathing opinion piece for The New York Times. A subsequent article in The Washington Post exposes Valerie and she is shunned by colleagues, who need to protect their own identities.

Fair Game is a gripping snapshot of the events leading up to the war in Iraq and the subsequent fallout for Valerie, Joe and their family. The script tries to avoid taking sides, despite the source material, by providing a clear and concise timeline of events in the corridors of power as the possibility of war becomes an inevitability.

The knot in our stomachs tightens with each passing frame as Valerie and Joe witness events spiralling out of control before them, and the terrible price they must pay for daring to lift the veil of secrecy and lies.

Watts and Penn deliver riveting, impassioned performances, laying bare the rage and disappointment that slowly threatens to tear their marriage apart at a time when they most need to mount a united front.

THE RESIDENT (15)

FOR more than 55 years, Hammer has been synonymous with the best and campest homegrown horror films.

The company was formed in 1934 but didn't really connect with audiences until 1955 and the release of The Quatermass Xperiment. A subsequent shift into the realms of Gothic monster movies gave birth to The Curse Of Frankenstein in 1957 with Peter Cushing as the demented doctor and Christopher Lee as his hideous creation.

Now the film-making brands add spit and polish to writer-director Antti Jokinen's psy-chological thriller, which fittingly features the first appearance by Christopher Lee for the studio in more than 30 years.

Set in the seemingly benign surroundings of present-day Brooklyn, The Resident propels a smart, intelligent woman into a living hell when she realises that her dream apartment is too good to be true.

The script, co-written by Robert Orr, is depressingly light on skin-crawling tension and shocks, and once Jokinen reveals the dark forces at play, all that remains is a slow build-up to the bloody final showdown.

Newly-divorced ER doctor Juliet Devereau

(Hilary Swank) has sworn herself off men after ex-husband Jack (Lee Pace) cheated with another woman.

She moves out and is thrilled to find a newly-renovated sixth-floor apartment with stunning views in her price range, with a hunky yet shy landlord, Max (Jeffrey Dean Morgan), to boot.

Max helps her move in and introduces Juliet to his grandfather August (Christopher Lee), who lives in a neighbouring apartment.

Over the coming days, Juliet grows close to swoonsome Max. However, Juliet hasn't fully recovered from the breakdown of her marriage and she has a nagging feeling that she is being watched.

The Resident is a rather tame and oldfashioned take on the unsuspecting heroine in peril, anchored by a typically strident performance from two-time Oscar-winner Swank. There's little in the script to test her acting mettle, her best moment coming when the camera focuses on Juliet's tearstained face as the medic stares at horrifying CCTV footage.

Lee lends gravitas to his flimsy and sinister role. Hammy horror.

Stand-up shares the bright lights of his Vegas wedding

BY NICK AMES

COMIC Tom Wrigglesworth is set to appear at Canterbury's Gulbenkian Theatre as part of his nationwide Nightmare Dream Wedding Tour.

It recounts the story of a recent trip to Las Vegas, involving a chat-show host with delusions of vast grandeur, a hypnotic hotel guest, currency-based disasters, wrong identities and last-minute wedding plans.

So it's nothing new to a man who once stepped in to help an elderly lady in distress – and found himself accused of begging as the police were called to the scene.

"I got married in Vegas and it was really spontaneous, which was what me and Lu Lu, my wife, wanted," he said. "We were staying at the Golden Nugget, which is an older place, downtown, not on the strip, and it had been a very sudden decision to go. We decided three or four days earlier and then just left.

"We got married in the Little White Chapel along the strip and the woman there went through all these celebrities who'd done the same – Frank Sinatra was one, Britney Spears another. But it was all so quick that I didn't catch that many other names.

"She asked us if we were English and when we said yes she told us Jack and Vera Duckworth had been married there in an episode of Coronation Street.

"The show focuses on how I almost didn't get to the church on time. Some of it I have made up – but some is shudderingly accurate.

"It's got a good reception and it's better than it was when I first did it in Edinburgh. It wasn't really ready then, but now it has been knocked into shape."

Wrigglesworth said he really enjoyed his time in Las Vegas – despite coming out on the wrong side when it came to gambling.

"I loved it and had a real hoot there," he said. "I'm totally aware that it is fake, but it has a shameless quality to it which I like. I think the key to it all is not to take it seriously.

"I'm a fair poker-player, but I didn't win at the tables. In fact I don't think I was ever ahead."

The Yorkshireman won the comedy newcomer award So You Think You're Funny? at the 2003 Edinburgh Festival Fringe.

In 2006 he performed with fellow comedian Tom Allen as a part of the show Allen And Wrigglesworth. In 2009 he was nominated for the main Edinburgh Comedy Award. He presented Radio 7's Comedy Club in 2010.

This year he had his own series of four programmes broadcast on BBC Radio 4 entitled Tom Wrigglesworth's Open Letters; it was placed in the 6.30pm slot on Thursdays.

This is based around four comic exchanges of letters with bureaucrats and corporate jobsworths. "Does anyone like them?" asked Wrigglesworth.

"I do like radio," he said. "The TV I have done has tended to be bits and bobs, five- or 10-minute slots, whereas the radio can be half an hour of me. I'm a lot more in charge."

He hit the headlines recently when coming to the aid of a pensioner on a train.

Lena Ainscow, 75, was left in tears when she was ordered to pay £115 for a new ticket to London.

So fellow passenge Wrigglesworth stepped in to organise a whipround to help her – but a guard said his actions were equivalent to begging ent to begging and warned him that the police would be called in.

The incident happened after Mrs Ainscow had set out from her home in Bolton on a trip via Manchester and London to see her daughter Carol Battersby, who lives in Bromley. Mrs Ainscow had bought an £11.50 pre-booked

Mrs Ainscow had bought an £11.50 pre-booked ticket for the 10.45am Virgin service from Manchester to Euston.

But her travel itinerary stated that she was booked on the 10.15am service and when she asked staff what she should do about the error they told her to board the earlier train.

However, when her ticket was inspected, she was told it was invalid and she must buy a new one. "When the guard said I had to buy a new ticket I

"When the guard said I had to buy a new ticket I was devastated," she said just after the event. "The only money I had was the savings I'd scraped together to get my grandchildren a present."

Wrigglesworth said: "I couldn't sit there and let this helpless woman deal with it on her own. I got a paper bag from the buffet car and told the other passengers that if we all gave 50p or £1 we would get the money in no time.

"Everyone was happy to help and someone even put in £30."

The ticket was bought and paid for, but when Wrigglesworth got off the train at Euston he was met by transport police officers.

He said: "Thankfully, a couple of the other passengers helped to explain. Once the police had been put in the picture, they walked away."

The incident was the spark for Wrigglesworth's previous tour.
"Funnily enough, I was sitting there thinking shall

"Funnily enough, I was sitting there thinking shall I do something or not, when it happened," he said. "In the end I did something and am very thankful that I did. It has certainly helped my career.

"And it has also got Virgin to change their policies — which were previously so inflexible. So that is good as well"

Johnson brought to life

A PLAY about the 18th century's most famous man of letters, Samuel Johnson, is to be staged at Eastwell Manor near Ashford.

A Dish Of Tea With Doctor Johnson is a two-hander starring Russell Barr and Ian Redford.

Samuel Johnson, born in 1709, was one of England's best-known literary figures. He was a poet, essayist, biographer and literary critic who wrote the first English-language dictionary, published in 1756.

The play has been adapted by Russell Barr, Ian Redford and the former director of the Royal Court Theatre, Max Stafford-Clark from Boswell's A Life Of Doctor Johnson and A Journal Of A Tour Of The Hebrides.

The evening of anecdotes and witty conversation brings to life one of literature's most colourful figures.

The actors will be joined by a Jack

Russell terrier called Katie, who will be playing Dr Johnson's cat, Hodge.

The play is being staged on Friday and Saturday, March 18-19.
On Friday morning, drama students will have an opportunity to attend a workshop with StaffordClark about rehearsal techniques and research into productions.

Talents at The Tower

MARCH sees The Tower Theatre in Folkestone play host to The Best Of British Jazz, a month of evenings dedicated to celebrated jazz musicians.

Hastings's own infant prodigy Liane Carroll (who started playing the piano aged three) will take to the stage on Thursday (March 17).

A regular at Ronnie Scott's Soho jazz club, the only artist ever to receive two BBC jazz awards in the same year will be play her debut at The Tower.

The Glastonbury headliner's venture into drum and bass has also proved successful as she toured New Zealand and Brazil with outfit London Elektricity.

But spectators can expect to hear a more traditional offering from a selection from albums such as Billy No Mates, Slow Down and Standard Issue, which won Carroll the Marston Pedigree Jazz Award.

A collaborator on Standard Issue, Bobby Wellins, above right, arguably the UK's bestloved tenor sax, will play the Tower on Thursday, March 24. Wellins has already graced the covers of two UK jazz magazines in recent weeks and will end the month on a high, treating the audience to his rich melodies

Limehouse Thai offers a sizzling taste of summer

HAVING previously taken my housemate to a truly dire Thai restaurant, for this review I felt it only fair we go somewhere at the other end of the quality scale, Limehouse Thai.

Located on Rochester high street, our first experience with the restaurant was the nightmare of parking, but fortunately our luck was in and we only had to walk about 100 yards to get to the lights of our destination, where our table was booked for 8pm.

On arrival we were informed that our table wasn't quite ready yet and ushered downstairs to the bar to peruse the menu over a couple of mango juices.

The menu offered the usual mix of Thai curries, along with a varied selection of dishes that neither of us had heard of. So, just to be imaginative, we both went for our old favourites from the starter menu.

I chose tom yum goong soup (£4.95). This hot-and-sour prawn soup had wimpy old me hiccuping over the spiciness but was simply delicious. At the time I believe I used much higher praise in my description, but as this met with a withering look from my housemate – who liked it but not quite that much – I thought I'd tone down my praise here.

She went for her usual tempura pak (£4.15) of deep-fried vegetables with a sweet-chilli dipping sauce. The plate was soon cleared, but she did feel the portion was a little on the large side for leaving room for the main course.

This time I decided to try something different and went for goong farang (£7.95), a sizzling platter of king prawns and asparagus in oyster sauce. It is not the asparagus season, but to me this dish was quite simply summer on a plate.

As a vegetarian, my housemate decided to go for something a little more unusual and so chose pad mamaung jay (£5.75), stir-fried tofu with cashew nuts. What to me looked like stirfried sponge was to her a tasty and flavorsome sauce, and spicy aubergine with fresh chilli and basil leaves (£4.95). The latter had a delicious tang of garlic and was a favourite with the housemate. Personally, I preferred the mixed veg, a much lighter dish which did not compete with my main.

We couldn't agree on a vegetable side, so

Then we also shared a bowl of coconut rice (£2.25), again a tasty dish, with just the right balance of flavour.

Unable to quite cram everything in, we asked the waitress to package up our leftovers

to take home with us before casting our eye over the dessert menu.

Feeling rather full, we decided to share a taco (£3.50) – what looked to be a traditional Thai dessert. This comprised a coconut custard with water chestnuts served in pandanus leaves; it looked, well, odd. We were served with four small squares of what struck me as being the Thai equivalent of jelly and custard - the white coconut set on top of what seemed, to my uncultured eye, to be a green jelly but which was more salt than sweet.

We struggled to decide if we liked it but did devour most of the dish before deciding we'd eaten too much and instead relaxed at our table with a coffee and a jasmine tea.

The restaurant was packed during our visit, but the tables were spaced far enough apart so that we didn't feel overcrowded.

It did meant we only saw the waiting staff when being served, but as we were perfectly happy with our meal that was not a problem.

I absolutely loved the meal, while my housemate enjoyed it but with a little more reserve. The final bill was £48.70.

Limehouse Thai, or its sister establishment the takeaway Grandma Thai, is definitely a place to which we will return.

It's jobs for Kent

A second bite at success

BURGER chain McDonald's is celebrating the success of 45 employees who recently completed the company's apprenticeship

Awarded a 'good' rating by the education watchdog Ofsted, the programme provides job-specific skills in customer service, teamwork and communications, and is equivalent to five GCSEs

The apprenticeship scheme sits in the middle of the fast-food giant's learning ladder, which ranges from work experience for schoolchildren to a foundation degree in managing business operations

Sherri Frier, 21, from Canterbury, was among the first to complete the qualification.

She said: "McDonald's has made learning accessible, not only by providing a course that varies between academic and practical studying but also by allowing you to earn while you learn.

"The apprenticeship is the second chance at education I never thought I would have. In five years' time I would like to be in a management position with the company as I love my job at McDonald's.

"The scheme has been a huge step towards achieving my goals and giving me the confidence to believe I can progress as far as I want to with hard work and commitment."

Almost 3,000 McDonald's staff from across the UK have already completed an apprenticeship with the company, while more than 7,000 are currently working towards achieving the qualification.

Nationally recognised and accredited by City and Guilds, it provides employees with transferable skills they can use in their future career.

Franchisee Paul Crocker, who runs a number of McDonald's restaurants in Kent, said: "The education landscape in the UK is evolving in the midst of the changing economic climate.

"As a result, vocational qualifications are more relevant than ever since they provide people with the opportunity to continue gaining qualifications at the same time as working in a relevant employment sector."

Keep Kent Working! It's jobs for Kent

Constructive career path opens for Kelli

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

FEMALE workers are being urged not to miss out on an expected explosion in the number of available construction jobs in the South East.

Despite the current high jobless figures in the region, construction employment is forecast to reach 395,740 in 2015, with an average rate of 5,440 new workers needed every year. According to CITB-ConstructionSkills, this shows that there is a wealth of opportunities available to women in Kent.

The charity is now encouraging the fairer sex to follow in the footsteps of people like Kelli Randall, from Gillingham, who is an apprentice engineer technician at Skanska

The 19-year-old is working towards a diploma in civil engineering and an NVQ in site technical support.

"I first got interested in civil engineering in sixth form at school and haven't looked back since," she said.

"My job is varied and hugely fulfilling, and I would urge other women to consider a career in construction if they haven't already. No two days are the same and there are new challenges every day, which is why I enjoy my job so much.

"Although the industry is male-dominated, everyone is so nice I tend not to notice I am working with men most of the time.

"Having said that, my current project manager is a woman and is a real source of inspiration as I look to the future and developing

The appeal for more women workers forms part of CITB-ConstructionSkills' Positive Image campaign, which aims to ensure there is a fresh supply of talent to the industry to help avert a retirement timebomb.

It was launched to coincide with International Women's Day on Tuesday.

Gillian Cain, regional delivery manager for the South East, said enthusiastic recruits to the construction industry will ensure companies have the skills they need to survive.

She added: "Kelli is just one of the many women who are helping to make construction and the built environment a diverse and successful industry.

"Although women and ethnic minorities are increasingly drawn to construction, they are still under-represented so we are urging them to get in touch to find out about the huge range of careers and routes into the industry available to them.

"Today's employers are looking to recruit from a much wider pool of talent, so now really is the time for more women to get involved and reap the benefits."

Visit www.cskills.org or call 0300 456 5824 for more information.

WHAT is your business doing to help Keep Kent Working? Are you running an apprenticeship scheme to attract young workers? Are your employees being sent on training courses to aid their personal development? Or are you funding a university scholarship to help find the businessmen and women of the future?

Train & Retrain & KENTADULT EDUCATION

Inspiring project is setting the stage for musical youth

A YOUTH training project aimed at inspiring young people through music is staging monthly gigs in Maidstone.

Training Them Live (TTL) is a not-forprofit organisation dedicated to providing its clients with the life skills required to aid their transition into further education and employment.

Last month it staged its first gig at the Babylon Live Lounge in King Street, Maidstone, with future shows planned for the first Sunday of every month.

TTL chairman Chris Ellen said: "Our project has been running for the last six years and is strongly supported by Medway Council, Kent Police, and local businesses and business partnerships.

"Training Them Live provides a youth engagement strategy through its music projects, which helps give bored youngsters places to go and keeps them out of harm's way. We are also able to provide them with valuable life-skill building blocks which help to support them in further education and employment.'

Among the skills taught to youths involved in the project include how to work both on stage and in the studio, and how to improve with their instruments of choice. Money raised from the gigs is donated to the Sittingbourne-based charity Demelza Hospice Care for Children.

Babylon Live Lounge owner Kirit Velani said: "We contacted Training Them Live having heard about their rock schools and the work they do in providing acts and event management for the Under Siege concerts at Rochester Castle.

"We've opened our doors to give musicians a chance to play in a real music venue, using and learning from all of our lighting and sound equipment."

The Sunday Night Live gigs are held over two floors, each with their own type of music, between 3-10pm on the first Sunday of every month.

Admission is £3 on the door. For more information, visit www.ttlgigs.co.uk

Hyundai stuns Geneva

HYUNDAI has confirmed that the D-segment in the motor market popularly known as the Mondeo sector - is dominated increasingly by estate car models.

The ambitious Korean marque did so by using the current Geneva Motor Show for the world premiere of its new D-segment contender (pictured), the i40 and showing it only in estate or 'wagon' - it will arrive in the UK in this format soon, to be followed by a saloon later this year.

It's a sharp-suited offering penned by Hyundai's German-based design team, reflects the luxury-cum-lifestyle image of the modern estate car as it attempts to beat MPV and crossover models on the market.

It also boasts features unavailable on some rivals, including heated folding rear seats; an auto-defog system; and heated steering wheel.

Hyundai also showed off its groundbreaking all-new three-door Veloster coupe – it has a rear door on the passenger side for greater useability - this a stunning looking coupe that doesn't have to be a 'holidays and high days' purchase.

And Geneva allowed the marque to show its Curb concept – an eyecatching urban crossover that will almost certainly see production in some form

And now a fresh dash of Picanto

Compiled by Steve Loader

KIA – Hyundai's sister brand – has unveiled an allnew version of its Picanto city car.

And while the current Picanto is available only as a five-door hatchback, the next generation version will be offered in a sportier three-door, too.

The marque, currently riding high on the media and market acclaim for its muscular Sportage SUV/crossover, has announced the new Picanto's four powertrains will also be fresh out of the box and with the low and competitive CO2 emissions levels now demanded by a greener motor market.

FIAT and its associated brands continue to set new standards in CO2 reduction, according to JATO Dynamics, the world's leading automotive consultancy.

Fiat Automobiles itself logged a CO2 average of just 123.1 g/km (4.7 g/km less than the 2009 average), placing it top of all brands for the fourth year running, and well ahead of the European target of 130g/km, due to be met in 2015.

Fiat also ranked first among the motor groups with 125.9g/km, an improvement of five g/km on last year and taking into account brands such as Ferrari, Maserati and Alfa Romeo.

However, the Italian group's CO2 crackdown continues to be epitomised by its big-selling small cars such as the Fiat 500C pictured – just the kind of models that eco-conscious consumers are now turning to

Mini Test Honda Jazz

IF YOU want a good example of a company that listens to its customers you have to look at Honda. Although the Japanese firm is well known for innovation, it's also keen to ensure it promotes a culture of happy drivers.

And there's no better example of this than the firm's Jazz. More than just a sleeper hit, the compact Jazz has proven to be a UK best seller. By choosing to develop something that was more than just another supermini, Honda struck a chord with buyers seeking something with a small footprint but with the flexibility and practicality of something much bigger.

Success

This revised second-generation car builds on the original model's success. Presenting a chunkier face to the world, Honda's engineers have added a few aerodynamic tweaks to boost cabin refinement and overall efficiency. The latter is important, as this element plus selective engines improvements have resulted in economy and emissions gains. It's also revised the car's ride and handling performance to boost driver appeal and cabin comfort.

Talking of green issues, this Jazz has the honour of being the first small production hybrid. Keen to broaden the appeal of such technology beyond its Insight model, the Jazz hybrid follows on from the Japanese firm's sporting CRZ petrol-electric model.

There's more good news in the shape of the reintroduction of a continuously variable transmission (CVT) as an option alongside the car's manual gearbox.

BEST SELLER: The Honda Jazz is popular with buyers looking for more than just a supermini

It might not sound like much, but the previously used automated manual transmission wasn't met with universal appeal.

As a result, Honda listened, took on board the feedback and now offers a CVT that should please buyers seeking a smoother experience akin to than of a conventional auto, but without the fuel economy penalties.

Existing Jazz owners will be familiar with the car's 1.2 and 1.4-litre petrol engines, which now boast CO2 levels of 123 and 126g/km respectively in manual gearbox trim and return a combined fuel economy reading in the low 50s mpg. The hybrid borrows much from Honda's existing Insight model, right down to the CVT gearbox.

It manages 62.8mpg and boasts a lower 104g/km CO2 rating, the latter Honda claims is the lowest for an auto gearbox car in the Jazz's market sector.

On the road the petrol cars are as you would expect – willing, capable and refined. In 1.4-litre trim plus the new CVT gearbox, the Jazz is easy to drive and the box offers a welcome extra layer of refinement over its predecessor.

Furthermore, the traditional enemies of CVT-equipped cars – inclines and fast-moving motorway traffic – are no barriers to progress. There's plenty of power available to get you moving and maintaining a steady speed.

This is also the case for the hybrid Jazz. Even in 'Eco' mode there's enough thrust available for out of town excursions, while urban motoring is dispatched with predictable ease.

The easy-to-read instrument displays keep you informed regarding fuel consumption and the current combination of engine and electric power, which do a clever job of nudging you in the direction of more considered and smoother driving behaviour.

Good though it is on the road, there's more to the Jazz than the driving experience. Its versatile nature is another major attraction for buyers, and the car's folding rear seats offer a greater level of versatility than the little Honda's more conventional rivals.

From furniture to bicycles, the Jazz will swallow many of these items whole. And for anyone seeking a car with a modest footprint, this feature is often a deal breaker. It also happens to be a hit with the business market; drivers who carry a lot of equipment but don't want - or their company car policy doesn't allow - a large, high CO2 car can opt for a Jazz with complete confidence.

With its well built and versatile cabin, a good level of standard kit plus the various improvements to the driving and ownership experience, Honda's Jazz remains a tough act to beat. The hybrid model will please those wanting to pay less for their motoring, too.

DrivingReview

Kia Ceed

YOU know how it is. You've got an exciting trip planned and you and your mates have a barrow-load of gear to take with you.

And at some point someone - invariably the sensible, boring one - mentions transport. Quite how you and your grizzled chums, along with rucksacks, seats, telescopes and tripods - we were going to watch whales from aboard the ferry to Bilbao – are going to cram into your little runabout hadn't occurred to you though.

After much casting around, we borrowed a Kia Ceed 1.6 CRDi ISG. It is not a monster – think Ford Focus for size – but was larger than anything we had to hand.

As things worked out, travel plans changed and the whole operation became a two-car mission with just three in our vehicle. No bad thing though, as three people and their clobber was enough for this model

We could have managed four, but it would have been a real squeeze and we might never have seen a pygmy-sized member of the party ever again.

However, as we all know, size isn't everything, as shown by the outstanding feature on the Ceed ISG – those last three letters are short for Intelligent Stop and Go.

The system works like this: when the car slows to below 3mph, say when approaching a junction or traffic lights, it stops. You select neutral and release the clutch and then simply restart when ready by depressing the clutch – 10 per cent, for the record, but I don't expect you to measure it - and away you go, smoothly and wholly efficiently.

We're talking Kia's EcoDynamics technology here: an official combined fuel consumption of 67.3mpg on this Ceed and CO2 emissions of just 110g/km that also qualifies the car for zero-rated road tax for year one and just £20/year thereafter.

In short, the less time your engine is running, the better it is for both your pocket and your beleaguered environment.

The scientific bit is not my world, but as a driver I can happily report that, once I'd got used to it, I grew rather fond of the ISG system. All was smooth, with no juddering, and it was easy to believe that here was a glimpse at a brave new (and not quite as dirty) world.

The Ceed range arrived in 2007; an all-new model and name, designed and built in Europe to attack Europe's finest - the VW Golf, Ford Focus and Vauxhall Astra - and featuring facets from all three, plus a mould-breaking seven-year/100,000-mile warranty as a significant extra.

This was the perfect lure for the most sceptical punters; once in the showroom, the curious could quickly see that the Ceed and its three-door Proceed and Ceed SW estate spin-offs are good products

Kia now concedes that the mega-warranty was a gamble that could have gone expensively wrong if the Ceed engineering team had messed up, but it didn't and all Kia models now come with a seven-year warranty.

Aware that the 2007-vintage Ceed could be fidgety on the road, Kia also boosted the handling and ride when it gave the car a facelift in 2010.

As for new kit, Kia says the car has an upgraded interior, though this looked about the same as before; no criticism though, since everything feels well-made and durable.

There are also exterior cosmetics, notably a far sleeker and more upmarket grille.

But ISG on the car's junior 89bhp 1.6litre/six-speed manual diesel powertrain is the highlight of the revamp and using Kia's new green 'EcoDynamics' sub-branding with energy-saving tyres. Ceed prices start at £13,085.

My Money 🛺

Online this week at www.mymoney24.co.uk:

This offer looks good – what's the catch?

I would be grateful for your opinion of the new Post Office bond that pays a yield of 1.5pc on top of the rate of inflation. I have read the terms and as far as I can see, the only downside is that you cannot withdraw your money for five years without providing a good reason and paying a penalty. I am happy with this, so is there anything else that I have missed?

There are two things you may have missed. Firstly, the return on the Post Office bond may not be calculated in exactly the way you think. And secondly, there is at least one rival index-linked product you might consider. The Post Office (0800 169 7500) bond is a five-year investment, with the return to savers calculated every April. So. if you invest, say, £1,000 and the retail prices index in April next year shows an annual rise of 5pc, your £1,000 will grow by 5pc plus the guaranteed 1.5pc top-up, turning it into £1,065. Now, you might think that in Year Two, your return is based on £1,065. Wrong! Your money goes back to square one. The £65 you have earned is frozen, and you start again with £1,000. The profits are paid out only at the end of the full five years. They are not compounded to earn even more as you go along. Of course, you might regard this as a small blot on an otherwise pretty landscape. After all, there are not many indexlinked investments to choose from. But there is one that has a couple of advantages of its own. Yorkshire Building Society's Protected Capital Account (0845 1200 100) pays the rate of inflation plus 0.1pc – but it pays income yearly throughout its five-year life. And, unlike the Post Office bond, you can hold this account as a tax-free Isa, which adds to the attraction. So if you want to draw an income or sidestep tax, this could be a better bet.

I have about £7,000 in a Natwest cash Isa, earning 0.5pc. Santander is offering 3.5pc. Should I take my money out of Natwest and open a Santander account? How can one bank pay so much more than

Whatever you do, don't take your Isa money from Natwest and think you can simply deposit it with Santander. If you withdraw money from an Isa, it loses its tax-free status. To stay taxfree, arrange for your existing bank to transfer the cash directly to your new bank. You must not touch it. But should you transfer? You are not really comparing like with like. The statement you sent me shows you have a cheap-and-cheerful Isa with Natwest. It has a variable interest rate that could rise if rates generally go up, you can operate it at your branch, and you are allowed instant access. The Santander leaflet you sent me offers a fixed 3.5pc, not a variable rate. You invest by post, not at a branch, and this is a two-year account that ties you in until 2013. If you are happy with the different terms, that's fine. But if you want the easy access that you have now, a better option might be the Halifax Isa Direct Reward account. It offers instant access, can be operated through a branch and pays 3pc interest.

I have a small private pension plan that matures in May. My pension provider told me I have the option to look on the open market for an annuity. I have found a company that beats my original annuity quote. As these firms must be registered with the Financial Services Authority, are there any problems I should be aware of?

Anyone saving in a private pension plan has the right to shop around on the open market before turning their retirement savings into an annuity. The company that has managed your pension investments might not offer the best value annuity, so it is good to see that you were actually reminded that you have this right. As all annuity firms go through the same licensing checks, and are covered by the same compensation scheme, there are no hidden dangers.

My son banked a cheque I gave him. The money has gone from my account but has not appeared in his. His bank says it is still in the system, a week after he deposited the

Your son's bank should show the money as available for his use from the fourth working day after he deposited the cheque. Even including a weekend would only take us up to six days, so if your son has been waiting a week, something seems wrong. He should complain to the bank and if there is no explanation, he should contact the Financial Ombudsman (0800 0234 567).

Are student loan repayments just based on income, or could I be made to hand over some money I have inherited?

Repayments are linked to your income and normally collected through the tax system. Your inheritance is not affected.

Don't leave us hanging on – it's so annoying

Listening to hold music on the telephone or standing in long queues is something that winds many people up - and if it annoys you, you're unlikely to be cheered up by the revelation that we each spend an average of 33 weeks of our lives doing it. A study by the Co-operative Bank has found that the average hold time per phone call is 10 minutes That might be frustrating enough in itself, but some callers have been left twiddling their thumbs for more than an hour-and-a-half. The top culprits for leaving customers on hold are dominated by television, internet and phone providers, domestic energy suppliers, banks and insurance companies.

The worst queues are at supermarkets, banks and post offices.

In the short term, such shabby customer service leads to anger and frustration.

Scots are apparently the least patient people when being made to wait on the phone, with callers typically hanging up after being left hanging on for about 20 minutes.

However, the research highlighted that consumers

Pensions changes 'a turning point'

The announcement this week that the state pensions system is to be given a complete overhaul has received a broad welcome from analysts, with one expert branding it "a turning point".

Work and pensions secretary Iain Duncan Smith said the existing system was too complex and means testing for pensioners discouraged many people from saving for retirement.

Although he did not unveil the details, there has been speculation that a single-tier pension could be worth about £140 a week. (Single people who receive the full state pension and pension credit currently get £132.60 a week.)

A move to a flat-rate state pension would remove disincentives for lower earners to build up savings, and such a change would be likely to benefit mothers, who currently lose out because of career breaks for raising children.

By ADAM AIKEN MyMoney24 editor

Joanne Segars, chief executive of the National Association of Pension Funds, was among those welcoming the announcement. "We are at a turning point for pensions in the UK," she said. "Radical state pension reform to create a single, simple and more generous state pension could take millions of pensioners out of poverty, and provide a firm foundation for saving for old age. For the first time in a generation, people would know that it pays to save.

"This is a golden opportunity for the government to begin meeting its commitment to 'reinvigorate occupational pensions' and to get the nation saving again. This comes not a occupational pensions' and to get the nation saving again. This comes not a moment too soon."

The latest quarterly Real Retirement

Report produced by Aviva suggested that more than two thirds of people did not know, or overestimate, the value of the state pension.

"Simplification will help to address this confusion and could encourage customers to make plans for their own retirement," said Paul Goodwin, head of pensions marketing at the insurer.

"With greater understanding of what individuals can expect from the state, people will be better placed to plan their own private savings."

There was also support for the news from accountants from accountants.

John Nunn, senior financial planning consultant at PKF, said: "Too often, people who have taken the trouble to save extra for their pensions find that their savings make them ineligible for pension credits and other benefits – so they end up paying twice for what they have. Meanwhile, those who have not bothered to save and just rely on the state pension get everything."

People who work in and around the plumbing sector are the latest to be targeted by the authorities in a clampdown on people failing to declare their earnings and pay the right amount of tax.

Under a plan announced by HM Revenue & Customs, plumbers, gas fitters, heating engineers and members of associated trades who have undeclared tax to pay can come forward until the end of May to

Isa countdown under way

The annual fight by Isa providers to get hold of people's cash is well and truly under way, with a number of new tax-free accounts being launched recently.

Anyone over 16 is allowed to invest up to £5,100 in a cash Isa in the 2010-11 tax year, but you cannot carry the allowance over. That means there is now less than a month to use this year's allowance before it is lost for

The banks and other financial providers know that many of us leave it until the last moment why there is traditionally a spate of new products launched around this time.

According to Moneyfacts.co.uk, there are more cash Isas with introductory bonuses available today than at the same time in the past two years.

Introductory bonuses can make accounts very attractive, but prospective customers need to remember that the rates they pay typically plummet to uncompetitive levels once the bonus period – which usually lasts 12 months - is up.

Spending on cars to rise

collectively planning to spend on cars over the next six months has hit a three-year high of £51.3bn, even though the number of people expecting to get a new or second-hand car has fallen slightly over the past half-year to 7.15 million.

The figures, compiled by Sainsbury's Finance, suggest that the average spend on a car will be about £7,170 up more than £500 on six months ago. "Although the number of people looking to buy a car has slightly dropped, the car industry should not be disheartened as the figures in this latest index present a much more encouraging picture for the sector than they did just 18 months to two years ago," said Steven Baillie, head of loans at Sainsbury's Finance.

"The VAT rise that came into force at the beginning of the year does not seem to be putting people off making a car purchase, and consumers appear to be realistic in knowing they are likely to need to spend a bit more."

The research also found that about one in five of those looking to buy a car will want to finance at least part of the purchase with a loan. It is thought that personal loans of £6.2bn will be advanced for this purpose over the next six months.

EAST Kent could become one of Government's flagship enterprise zones to help fuel job growth and attract new businesses in the run up to Pfizer's closure.

In what would be a revival of a Thatcher-era scheme, 10 areas of the UK could be selected as specialist zones that would benefit from company tax breaks and lenient planning rules.

Councils may also be able to keep all business rates they raise in the zones. Chancellor George Osborne said the plan – costing £100 million over four years - would help attract new business and boost employment.

Kent County Council leader Cllr Paul Carter and South Thanet MP Laura Sandys are expected to put forward a case at Whitehall pushing for east Kent to be considered as one of the 10 zones, despite speculation that northern parts of the country are being targeted.

They will use Pfizer's departure from Sandwich in 2012 and the resulting 2,400 job losses to argue their case.

Flagship

During an adjournment debate in the House of Commons this week, Ms Sandys told science minister David Willetts that east Kent, stretching along the Manston corridor, should be looked upon as a potential for the scheme.
"We would like the Government to look on this area as one of the flagship enterprise zones," she said.

Mr Willetts said the Government was focusing on all the issues surrounding Pfizer's decision to leave the Sandwich site, including the possibility of the area becoming a specialist zone.

"There is much work to be done on the exact design - to what extent it is a matter of rate relief, liberalising the planning regime or other special tax reliefs," he said.

"Both the definition of the scope for enterprise zones and the choice of the areas where those will be are important. I know that the case for this area of Kent will be made powerfully."

Under the Conservative Government during the mid-1980s to early 1990s, 38 zones were established - the most famous being the redevelopment of the Isle of Dogs in London's Docklands, now Canary Wharf – but many of these lapsed back into depression after only a

The move gives fresh hope to politicians fighting to save the east Kent economy and the thousands of Pfizer workers at risk of losing their

Ms Sandys, who has called on ministers to press Pfizer for more time before the redundancy process starts, said the area needed Government commitment for the long term.

"We have a once in a lifetime opportunity to turn our local economy around so that in years to come my colleagues and I can proudly state, Yes, our area is part of the South East economy," she said.

During the same parliamentary debate, the issue of transport was also raised. Ms Sandys said the east Kent economy had been crying out for years for better transport links. "The area is 70 miles for London, but can take two hours to reach by train," she said.

Upgrade

"The minister [Mr Willetts] experienced a very lengthy train journey of two-and-a-half hours because of both a slow train and works on the line, so he knows that, per mile, Sandwich to London is one of the slowest routes in the country.

"I therefore ask for the Government's support for our bid to get the rail line from London to Thanet upgraded so that we can get to Thanet within the hour.

"That would revolutionise our local economy. Mr Willetts admitted he had experienced a "painfully slow" journey on a recent visit to Sandwich and said there were some transport

He said Government would consider calls for an improved rail service between Thanet and London as well as a new station on the line.

He also touched on the significance of Manston airport to the economy.

Ms Sandys added that following Pfizer's decision to leave Sandwich, it was vital for Government to help secure investment and encourage new business start-ups on the site.

ASHFORD business bosses say the town is booming thanks to substantial investment from both the private and public sectors.

Since the turn of the year a number of multi-million-pound companies have moved into the market town, while existing firms have also expanded. National retail giant Dobbies led the way by opening an £8 million 48,000 sq ft store at the fast-expanding Eureka Park. The move created 120 jobs.

Eureka's developers, Quadrant Estates, are now building a new phase of offices at the site, alongside junction nine of the M20.

HE unrelenting rise of reality TV has seen an uncomfortable shift in the public's notion of celebrity. Where once it was widely accepted that genuine talent, dedication, sacrifice and hard work was needed to reach the top, now anyone can seemingly make it into the soulless and vacuous pages of the glossy magazines.

We thought we had it bad when all the boys at school wanted to be David Beckham and all the girls wanted to be Jordan. Now thousands of youngsters across the country have their hearts set on being the next Jedward or Cheeky Girls.

And why? For the perceived financial wealth that comes with fame. These bling-obsessed teens don't want to be teachers or nurses, plumbers or painters.

They want to be mega-rich pop stars, with all the associated trappings: a 20-bedroom mansion, a fleet of luxury cars, a miniature dog in a handbag and a vat of fake tan.

But perhaps not for much longer.

Chancellor George Osborne's Project Merlin has brought a new type of mega-rich superstar to the fore - the bankers

The agreement between the Government and the UK's four biggest banks will disclose bonuses paid out to their top earners.

Barclays' new chief executive Bob Diamond received a £6.5 million bonus for 2010. That's on top of his £250,000 salary.

And if Diamond hits future targets, his 2010 pay package could top £9m.

RBS and Lloyds, both of which were saved from going under by huge Government bail-outs, also handed out bumper bonuses to RBS chief Stephen Hester received £2m, while Lloyds counterpart Eric Daniels was given £1.45m.

So that's a £9m bonus if you head up a profitable bank, and £1.45 million if you don't. Not bad either way.

Expect to see Diamond, Hester and Daniels alongside the likes of Hollywood A-listers and Premier League footballers in the pages of the glossy magazines soon.

And kids everywhere saying: "When I grow up I want to become a hedge-fund manager for an irresponsible, Government-funded banking corporation.'

Offshore wind farm work is under way

WORK has begun on building the London Array offshore wind farm.

The first of the 177 foundations, each weighing 268 tonnes – the equivalent of 35 double-decker buses was sunk into the Thames Estuary on Tuesday.

Once phase one of the wind farm is completed next year, 175 turbines will generate enough electricity to power 480,000 homes per year.

Tuesday's milestone was hailed by the energy firm behind the London

Array project.

Anders Eldrup, chief executive of DONG Energy, said: "This is a significant milestone for London Array – off the shore and into the water.

"Soon we'll be seeing turbines going up and the wind farm starting to generate low-carbon electricity."

Dr Frank Mastiaux, chief executive of E.ON climate and renewables, said: "Installing the first foundation on schedule marks another major step in the construction of the world's largest offshore wind farm.

"It's a great moment for the team now all the detailed planning and preparation over years can finally be seen out in the water."

Dr Sultan Al Jaber, chief executive of Abu Dhabi-based joint partner

GENERATION NEXT: London Array's Cleve Hill substation, near Graveney

Masdar, said: "The installation of the first foundation demonstrates the commitment and desire to make London Array a reality, and is testament to the industry-leading resources and experience exemplified by this strategic partnership. Masdar is proud to be at the heart of this ambitious effort."

Each foundation consists of a tubular steel monopile, driven 20 to 50 metres into the seabed, and a large yellow transition piece, which is fixed over the top of the monopile to provide the base for the turbine.

The monopiles are between 33 and 65 metres long and weigh between 200 and 650 tonnes, while the transition pieces are between 20 to 28metres high and weigh between 245 to 345 tonnes.

London Array is being built about 20km off the north Kent coast.

If approved, the second phase will add enough capacity to bring the total to 1,000MW.

"We aim to give our clients the best possible service, without the London price tag, and the fact that we are the only UK agency this year to win the award, just underlines what we always believed was possible."

SHEPHERD Neame has received a silver award in the Green Tourism Business Scheme.

The Faversham brewery was given the award after proving to be actively engaged in reducing the negative environmental and social impacts of its tourism operations.

Sheps' visitor centre manager Graham Hukins said: "We are very pleased to have received this award, which recognises the sustainable practices we have in place for the benefit of the environment, the community, visitors and the company.

SOCIAL care provider Avante Partnership held its inaugural Stars Awards night to recognise committed staff who had contributed to the organisation's success.

The partnership – which includes Avante Care and Support, Avante Community Support and Stepahead Support – was established in 1990 and is now one of the largest care providers in the South East and London.

Chief executive Cedric Fredrick said: "I felt it only seemed right that staff – past and present – should be saluted and recognised as an Avante Star, and what better way to do this than to have an awards night? From this the Stars Awards was born for a night to remember."

SMALL and medium-sized firms are being advised to get their book-keeping in order, on the eve of a Customs clampdown.

The company's Gary Richards said: "Keeping up to date with book-keeping can be a big administrative job that often becomes a burden to small businesses

"However, keeping on top of records can lead to better management of your business and its cashflow. Plus, HMRC is less likely to take further action if your records are found to be satisfactory."

"In addition, we have paid £267m into our pension fund in the last year. Looking to the future, while we expect more difficult conditions for much of the year, we are confident of our plans. We will invest £600m this year and expect to create 4,300 new jobs."

One area that has already benefited from investment is Tunbridge Wells, with the west Kent town's John Lewis at home store opening in November, 2010.

Branch manager Gabby Armstrong said: "The shop opened with a 90 per cent majority of new partners, with the total partners working here 220.

"Since opening, we experienced a buoyant Christmas and clearance period, where the team reacted fabulously to the high demand, offering an exceptional level of service – a great achievement for all our partners.

"Bonus day for us is a new and exciting experience. This will the first time many reap the rewards of being a partner in John Lewis. It's our business and we should all feel proud of our achievements.

"I'm very proud of the team's achievement here. They are amazing, so bonus day is our time to celebrate."

John Lewis Bluewater managing director Karen Lord said: "We underwent a major refurbishment in 2009, introducing a fourth trading floor featuring one of only two food halls in the division's portfolio and a new kitchenware department.

"The success of this led to the branch finishing the full trading year at plus-12 per cent. This was a record year's trade for us and a result our partners are proud of.

"The food hall continues to get positive feedback from customers. We are looking forward to another exciting year and our partners are committed to continuing to give great service."

John Lewis saw operating profit rise 22.2 per cent to £201.2m, while Waitrose profits went up three per cent, £8.1m to £274.9m.

Berth of profits boost

HIGHWAY Marine has gone hitech in a bid to boost profits.

The Sandwich-based firm has enlisted the services of The Waypoint, which enables boat owners to book berths over the internet or via smartphone.

The online booking facility, launched at last month's London Boat Show, helps marinas maximise revenue on empty berths by advertising them on a central database.

Sailors can log in and immediately search and book a berth in their marina of choice with just a click of a button.

Highway Marine's mooring manager, James Blackmore, said: "We wanted to gain web presence for our berths and The Waypoint is a great platform to achieve this without having to invest heavily in new technology or web advertising. We are looking forward to seeing the benefits of using it over the coming months and the ease with which sailors will be able to book berths with us."

The Waypoint co-founder Charles Bacon said: "Being webbased, we benefit from a number of advantages over the typical database or office whiteboard.

"By updating vacancies online, the whole boating world can now find out about berths. Also, because it's free for marinas to sign up for the first year, there's nothing to risk and everything to gain. A number of marinas have already signed up and we are delighted to welcome Highway on board."

Highway Marine has been providing services to sailors and boat owners since the 1970s.

Career U-turn rediscover his

THE B G INTERVIEW

Farm estate manager Oliver Doubleday made the decision to take a career U-turn while out driving in the Kent countryside. The father-of-three chose not to pursue his work as a molecular biologist and returned to Bax Farmhouse at Tonge, near Sittingbourne, to continue the business' 150-year association with his family. Mr Doubleday keeps his eye in through the East Malling Research facility and believes further food science has a big part to play in the future.

He spoke to Business Week editor Simon Robinson

LIVER Doubleday says he is the man with the oil can. The 59year-old explains that his job on his family's Sittingbourne estate is to keep things running and the wheels turning.

"I really like people to get on and I really want to facilitate that," he said. "In some ways I see myself as the guy who's there to keep an eye on things and if I see something that needs oil, then I will oil it.

He began working on the farms in 1981 but it was not a given that he would continue the long father-to-son lineage.

Pointing to family portraits hung side-by-side in his unassuming Bax Farmhouse office, Doubleday explained: 'T'm the son, grandson and great grandson of farmers. My family has been in farming here for more than 150 years.

"But I was trained as a molecular biologist and carried out post-doctoral research in Belgium, Holland then briefly in the US before coming back here.

"The turning point came for me when I was driving through Kent on a beautiful spring day.

"I thought to myself, 'Do you want to end up as a professor in Paris filling in forms and funding applications?

The father-of-three has fused his family's business with his scientific background, taking an interest in research and development of the farming industry.

HIS interest has seen Doubleday take up the position of chairman at East Malling Research (EMR), the UK's principal provider of horticultural research and develop-

Eyes on the prize for IoD's shortlisted trio

By SIMON ROBINSON

simon.robinson@kosmedia.co.uk

THREE Kent business bosses have been shortlisted for an Institute of Directors' prize.

The efforts of Kevin Kneebone, Nicky Pearson and Steve Martin have all been recognised ahead by the IoD's London and South East Director of the Year awards.

The trio will learn their fate at a gala dinner in London on Tuesday, March 22.

Kneebone, managing director at landmine clearance firm BACTEC International has been nominated in the international business up to £24.99 million category.

During his eight years with the Rochesterbased business he has moved control of the company to a board of directors but also found the time to get his hands dirty in the field.

'I like to lead from the front and set an example," he said. "Recently I was in the middle of the Baltic Sea working on a project disposing of unexploded ordnance with leading edge in-house technology developed by BACTEC. I'll shortly be heading off to the Middle East to do the same."

Pearson founded The Beauty Works in Dartford in 1993. The managing director has been shortlisted in the £5m to £24.99m category. The company designs and commissions the manufacture of consumer health, fitness and electrical beauty products and clients include Tesco, Asda, Next, Sainsbury's, Wilkinsons,

Having survived the 2008 collapse of another major client, Woolworths, the company now boasts a turnover of £5 million and 10 staff.

"We believe we can do anything any of our clients ask of us," said Pearson. "There is no hierarchy here, everyone contributes with ideas and we are constantly moving forward. As a result we can move and respond much quicker than our bigger competitors.

Martin is in the running for Director of the Year for companies with a turnover of up to £4.99m.

He founded Xmo Strata in 2002 and has grown it into one of the UK's leading sign installation and maintenance companies, with clients including BP, Shell, Esso and Chevron.

True to his desire to establish the safest and best-quality service provider in the field, he has refused to cut back on staff training and development during the recession and encourages his teams to take the lead.

He said: "I like my staff to give me solutions. I couldn't fit a sign in a million years so if we are looking at a new procedure I'll get four or five people together and we'll try it, take suggestions, try it again and agree the best way."

The IoD awards are sponsored by

 ${\bf Price water house Coopers.}$

The firm's South East regional leader, John Minards, said: "This year we received a record number of entries and the calibre of the nominations was incredibly high.

"All the finalists have demonstrated best in class performance and we would like to congratulate them on reaching

Sparkling jewel in port's crown

By SIMON ROBINSON

AN ELEGANT seafront hotel is set to reopen after being restored to its original Regency splendour.

The 81-bedroom Best Western Dover Marina Hotel and Spa has undergone a multi-million-pound renovation and now boasts three conference rooms, a restaurant and bar, seafront coffee shop and ice cream parlour and a fitness and spa centre.

The hotel, which takes up a large mid-section of the five-storey Grade II-listed Waterloo Crescent terrace, is being run by Leaf Hotels, which operates two other hotels in east Kent.

Sixty jobs have been created at their latest hotel.

Leaf Hotels general manager David Otteson

Leaf Hotels general manager David Otteson said he was delighted with the results of the six-month restoration project.

"The hotel is the jewel in Dover's crown, with breathtaking views across the beach and the harbour to the Channel and beyond to France," he said.

"Thanks to its fusion of 21st-century comfort and 19th-century styling, the hotel is full of character and charm. With excellent access to ferry and cruise terminals, it's ideal for business and leisure.

"This is a wonderful place to stay, an ideal base to enjoy the delights of Kent, or a day trip to France and Belgium."

The hotel boss also praised the quality of the refurbishment work undertaken by award-winning interior design practice Nicholas Hollinshead Interiors.

He said: "The brief was to blend the original 1830s features with modern-day facilities and the result is stunning. Wallpapers, carpets and furniture have been sourced from all over the world to make this one of the most stylish hotels in Kent. We are all thrilled with the outcome."

Tourism champion Visit Kent's chief executive, Sandra Matthews-Marsh, said the hotel will be a boost to the county's tourism industry. "They are to be congratulated for having the vision, dedication and commitment to deliver such an exciting project," she said.

"The hotel is a welcome addition to the hospitality sector. The county needs additional high-quality bed stock and the Best Western Dover Marina Hotel and Spa offers just that."

The hotel, formerly known as the Churchill, caters for weddings, meetings and conferences, plus theme nights, fine dining parties and private dining

It will be officially reopened on Thursday, March 24.

LEEDS Castle's newly-restored private function wing has proven a huge success – with wedding bookings alone at a four-year high.

The historic castle's Maiden's Tower has been converted into a multi-purpose conference facility and also boasts five bedrooms with en-suite bathrooms.

The Tower, which played host to movie-star parties in the 1920s and '30s and was the setting for secret political discussions during World War Two, was reopened in its current guise in October, last year.

Leeds Castle's hospitality business manager Debbie Matthews said feedback had been overwhelmingly positive.

"It's going really well," she said. "The facilities have been well received. The Tower appeals to different markets. Wedding bookings are buoyant - the highest in four years - but corporate bookings have also been high thanks to the two flexible support rooms we can offer.

"The great thing is that we're yet to see just how fantastic the Maiden's Tower can be. Once the summer comes we can get the most out of the private garden. We're really pleased with the response."

Built in the early 12th century to replace the earlier Saxon manor of Esledes, Leeds Castle was later home to a succession of kings and queens.

Perhaps its most famous owner was Henry VIII, who spent lavishly to transform the castle from a rugged fortress into a royal palace and was responsible for much of its splendour.

He ordered the construction of the Maiden's Tower in about 1544 in preparation for the visit of his first queen, Catherine of Aragon, to house the royal maids of honour.
